

(past and projected) in US imports of energy goods, the FTA offers the United States important benefits in terms of the security of US energy supplies.

For its part, Canada sees major benefits to be derived from the removal of US market-access barriers for Canadian shipments of uranium, crude oil, refinery products and other energy goods. We look forward to greater security of access and the disappearance of existing or threatened US barriers to energy trade such as an oil import fee.