Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, you have grouped Motions Nos. 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10 and 11 for debate. These are on a number of clauses which basically deal with the same subject.

Customs Tariff

We have expressed our concern about the way the Government has been dealing with the whole issue of its trade deal with the Americans.

Presently, the House of Commons committee studying this question is hearing witnesses from all across the country without having the final text before it. We are in a situation where the promise made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in the House on October 5 has been ignored by the Government. At page 9632 of Hansard, the Prime Minister stated:

Mr. Speaker, I shall table the complete text of the Agreement as soon as the wording is finalized. It will then be referred to the appropriate committee of the House for analysis, study and debate.

On October 5, the Prime Minister promised the House and the people of Canada that the House of Commons committee would have the finalized document before the committee hearings in order that the committee could hear from witnesses from all parts of the country who had the document in front of them before he rushed off to Washington to sign the final trade deal.

• (1120)

It is now December 3, two months after the Government signed the Elements of Agreement, and we still do not have a finalized copy. Negotiations may or may not be taking place today to try to get a final copy of that document ready. It is now less than a month before the Prime Minister wants to sign a document which not one of us in the House has seen. This document is not even ready. Yet we know that it is a document which will fundamentally change the economy of this nation.

Mr. Jelinek: Improve.

Mr. Murphy: Some say it will improve, some say otherwise. But the problem is that we do not have the document. There is presently a committee of the House in Halifax, and it does not have the document. There are witnesses appearing before that committee, and they do not have the document. It is not acceptable for us in the House to pass any legislation at this time which gives the Government a blank cheque when it comes to trade deals and tariff reductions. We will do nothing to make it possible for the Government through Order in Council to do what it should be doing through proper legislation, debate, our committee system, and through the House itself.

As I stated in an earlier speech, we will not expedite the passage of Bill C-87 because it helps the Government move along the road to its trade deal. We do not believe that, in any sense, passing legislation in a legitimate and orderly process is happening at this time.

If the Government was able to negotiate a deal with the Americans, as it claims it has done, all that had to be done was the following, to use the Prime Minister's words when he stated:
