

" Premier Taillon said he was glad to hear Mr. Morris' remarks, because it would tend to dispel the impression which it had been sought to create in some quarters.

" Mr. Stephens said the Protestants never had much cause to complain, and he did not want another impression to go forth.

"The Premier was happy to see such breadth of mind, and said some of the other provinces which he need not name, might draw a lesson therefrom. This closed the incident.
