IDA TALKS OF POLICE TROUBLE

BY IDA L. WEBSTER.

Yesterday the board of police commissioners excelled all their previous efforts at incompetency when they deliberately dismissed 12 men, some who had been on the force for over thirty years, the only excuse for their actions being that the men were connected with the newly-formed police union, and were therefore were connected with the newly-formed police union, and were therefore not eligible to the honor of being "driven" by so worthy a gang as Denison, Winchester and Grasett.

If there was ever a piece of impudence perpetrated in this city by any paid servants of the public to equal paid servants of the public to equal this trick of the police commissioners, then, indeed, are we greatly mistaken. then, indeed, are we greatly mistaken. Any body of men who would deliberately and with forethought take the step which the old men who form the police commission have taken can only expect to be classed among the breeders of Bolshevism.

The police force was willing to go back to work, and to stick to it, providing, of course, that the constables back to work, and to stick to it, pro-viding, of course, that the constables were granted a few of the concessions which they had asked for. They were promised that all of their grievances would be heard and remedied. That, of course, was merely bunk, which one would naturally imagine would be a thing which men who pride thema thing which men who pride them-selves upon having saved the Domin-ion of Canada from utter destruction in the wars of the early days would in the wars of the early days would not stoop to.

Evidently there are war heroes who are not exactly what one might call strictly on the level. Had the commission not promised to listen to the men, or had they had nerve enough to tell the men that they would take the first opportunity to dismiss those who were connected with
