While the advocates of a bigger army and navy always talked of national defense, the Socialists, he said, felt it really meant a tendency of American capital to get the power to exploit Mexico and South America. Pleter Jelles Toestra, head of the Dutch delegation, said that national differences among the beligerent Socialists were still too strong for united Socialist action. He urged all Socialists to see that the development of socialistic tendencies by the war was not used for the strengthening of absolutism and bureaucracy.
