

"On St. John's Standard charges that Hon. William Pugsley objected to the vote of money to extend the breakwater at Partridge Island. The charge is false.
 Here is what Dr. Pugsley said, as recorded in Hansard of Sept. 16:

 Mr. Pugsley: "Some years ago when I was Minister of the Interior, I was called to the importance of this work. We were then deterred from going ahead with the work by the high cost of the expenditure that would be involved. Of course, as the minister states, the business of the harbor is of the greatest importance since that time, and any expenditure that is reasonably necessary to protect it, whether it be for the breakwater or otherwise, is justified. I think the minister ought to mention one reason why this work should be prosecuted.
 The dredging which has been done has been done in the harbor on the west side has been at Beacon bay, to make the harbor deeper. The same further harbor improvement has been the deepening of the channel leading from the harbor to the breakwater.
 The depth of the channel has been increased to about twenty-eight feet, and the water is now so deep that ships can depart without waiting for the rising of the tide. But the channel runs past this open space between the breakwater and Partridge Island.

The depth of the channel, of course, is very much greater than the depth of the space between the breakwater and the Island. The result is that when storms come from the southwest, a great deal of silt is carried into the narrow deep channel, which is being dredged. That must necessarily be dredge the channel and the breakwater. The great expense of construction of the breakwater in again deepening the channel. There is no doubt that the great expense in connection with the keeping of the channel at the proper depth by the construction of the breakwater is a very important point which should also be considered. I am sure the minister will agree with me that it is a thing to be thought of."

 Mr. Macdonald, who followed, began his remarks by saying:

 "I very greatly regret that I am compelled to make a statement on the subject of the breakwater at St. John's (Mr. Pugsley) and also with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.
 They make out a good case for the breakwater at St. John's, but the same kind of a case could be made out for an improvement in almost any harbor in the world."

 Instead of opposing the passage of the vote for the extension of the breakwater at St. John's, Mr. Macdonald's explanations facilitating its passage

Anthracite Coal!

That anthracite coal has been found in Queen county is a fact that has caused some excitement through the province. The discovery was made recently by a geologist, a well-known gentleman who had secured a permit to search for silver. He found a vein which had the appearance of, and was in fact, anthracite.

"I have spoken with some of the biggest men in England, and that is their opinion," he added. "The general opinion is that the Germans will, most likely, make proposals before the winter sets in, in which the Allies will be able to consider."

MADAME PETROVA IN UNUSUAL DRAMA "THE UNDYING FLAME" AT UNIQUE

The Unique is departing somewhat from its policy the last three days of this week is presenting the renowned Polish novelist, Henryk Sienkiewicz's historical novel, "The Undying Flame." The first part of the story takes place in ancient Rome, in the reign of the emperor Nero, a beautiful daughter of a Pharos. She is loved by a shepherd but her father wishes to marry her to a rich Roman. She is persecuted and at last is thrown into a cave and left to die. Before he is executed the latter breaks in two doors and, going out, kills the emperor Nero and his army. The shepherd returns and, regretting that the other buried with him, according to superstition that their souls will be united. The sequel of this romance is found in modern Egypt where we meet Fara, a girl who is called the Undying Flame. Fara is a girl who has come with him to inspect the garrison at Aouda. During their visit, a polo match takes place and in the course of the game Grace had occasion to hand the ball to young Captain Paget, an officer who has already attracted her attention. The next day, when the question of having performed the same feat at other times, and as a matter of fact, the next day, the same feat is performed. The exact duplicate of what had taken place between the shepherd and the princess in ancient Rome is repeated. The same feeling which the same uncertainty feeling until the termination is reached when an old fortune-teller gives her a prophecy that the girl who she shall have found the other half will be a shepherd. The complete. Being merely a story, it is not intended to be taken too seriously. It is inclined to laugh at her own foibles and thoughts on the subject until she sees the Captain Paget, riding on a white horse, and, riding

May Be That "Sink Without Trace" Policy Prevails—Thinks by This Time Measures Against Submarines Should be More Effective

Sept. 29.—(Morse, Gazette.)—The Times naval correspondent's comments on the weekly submarine returns:

"The office return of losses by mines and submarines continues to show a reduction in the total of all classes of vessels. This total has now fallen below 100,000 tons, and is the lowest since August. It is always possible that such a fall in figures may portend a new lull in the operations of the submarines over the large increase of late in the number of vessels posted at Lloyd's as being lost. It is, however, not necessary to take account of the avowed policy of sinking of ships with the crews, and the fact that the number of such sinkings has been reported as missing this year represents a considerable increase on the previous year."

"At the same time it is fair to assume the hint is making progress and that the submarine campaign is being pushed. Still it is not clear whether the virulence of the attack has abated or whether the U-boats have altered their tactics. The fact that the loss of merchant ships was attacked off the French coast on September 5 by six boats lends some support to the latter view. It is possible that the lessons is that the slow merchant ships furnish a large portion of the vic-

German scheme of a short sharp campaign. Von Kuhlvetter's admission that the date for a decisive stroke had been extended until April 1918, is also confirmation of this ratio of escapes to attacks and appears to support the theory that promiscuous attacks have been exchanged for concentrated efforts against selected ships.

"It is likely we shall never be able entirely to suppress the underwater war on merchant marine. After all the experience gained, the measures taken should be more effective. Although the activities of the U-boats may never be stopped completely, they may, however,
