

BRIDE SAID WHITE SOUGHT BRAIN CHILD

She Says His Contemplated Books Were Among Differences That Led to Separation.

The dirt and disorder of the home he provided for her, his desire to have only "brain-children," as he called a series of books he had in contemplation, were among the points of difference which led to the break between Charles White, of Marlboro, N. Y., and his twenty-year-old French bride, Mrs. Andreë Simon White, according to a statement by the latter.

"He began to tell me of his plans as soon as I arrived at his place on the afternoon of May 6," said Mrs. White. "I told him that unless he fixed the house up I would have to leave him. The cooking utensils, for instance, were encrusted with rust. I told him he would have to purchase some new furniture for that in the house was so dilapidated that one was constantly in danger of falling to the floor."

"You are a Parisian, but you'll get used to this," he replied. "You'll think outdoor life wonderful after a while. You must know that true education consists in adapting one's self to the environment."

"I said nothing, but I cried. The only food he had in the house was eggs, stale bread and butter. Mr. White said the butter was some he had saved from last year. I tasted it—he spoke the truth. In the morning I learned that Mr. White's normal diet was fried eggs, bread and water, and, as a special treat, black coffee. I hope never to see fried eggs again."

Mrs. White repeated her story of her alleged beating by White the next day of how the final break came on Thursday, her last day at White's mountain shack. She said that White frequently talked to her of his views on marriage, at one time speaking for three hours in the manner of a lecturer. She continued:

"The ideal marriage, he said, should be a spiritual union. He said that the minds of husband and wife should be joined together and that their united aims should be devoted to the betterment of the world or their resident community. He said he did not want any children. He wanted to write a book with me helping him, and said that our book would be our child. Our 'book-child,' he called it.

"He said that we would have a happy marriage trying to change the world. He wanted to establish a colony of radicals with his home as the centre of it. He pictured me as a sort of a queen of this group, dispensing wisdom and seeing into the future."

"I wanted just a home—a clean, decent place. I did not want to change the world. I did not want to be the leader of any radical community. I did not even want to be a radical."

Mr. White who was found resting in a swing made out of birch saplings, said he did not expect to take the stand against his wife in her suit for annulment, because he would have to admit many of the things she had said about their temperamental differences. Asked about her reference to their projected "book-child," he said:

"Yes, that is right. I think intel-tual persons should have books for children—brain-children. Mind you, though I love little children, but I also love books."

Mr. White was asked how he regarded the notoriety of his neighbors, some of whom gave him a coat of tar and feathers after learning of his alleged ill treatment of his wife.

"I know about these mutterings," he replied. "I know of the feeling of hostility toward me, and I wish to say that I expect to be given an opportunity to bare my soul to the residents of Marlboro within a few days. I believe that it will be in the Presbyterian Church. If this feeling of hostility persists, I will leave this garden spot. I could not remain where I was not wanted and where my neighbors were not friendly."

At the ivy-covered Presbyterian Church in the village of Marlboro it was said that Mr. White would not "bare his soul" there.

BUSTER KEATON WEDS
NATALIE TALMADGE

The marriage of Miss Natalie Talmadge, a screen star, and Buster Keaton, a film comedian, took place the other afternoon at the summer home at Bay-side, L. I., of the bride's sister, Miss Norma Talmadge, who in private life is Mrs. Joseph M. Schenck.

It was a quiet country wedding, staged in the midst of flowers and foliage. The ceremony was performed on the piazza of the Schenck home, which was decorated with a profusion of snow-balls and other late spring flowers. Justice Valenti of the city court officiated.

Miss Constance Talmadge, who is Mrs. John P. Alague in private life, was matron of honor for her sister. The bride wore a simple frock of pale gray and her sister was also gowned in gray. Ward Crane acted as best man.

The honeymoon will be spent in Los Angeles, and the bride is to appear with the bridegroom in his next picture play.

Their engagement first became known last winter, when Miss Talmadge was at Palm Beach. They first met in California several years ago.

JUDGMENT IN VALLEY RAILWAY CASE AT OTTAWA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, June 7.—In the supreme court today judgment was given dismissing the appeal of the St. John and Quebec Railway vs. Jones et al., the costs to be paid by the appellants' solicitors. The railway company was incorporated in New Brunswick in 1909 and leased for 99 years to the Dominion government in 1914. The case was brought to establish the system as a public work of Canada, and accordingly sought to overthrow a provincial order-in-council which vested the shares of the company in the provincial government and ousted the board of directors from their office.

The appeal of the Berliner Gramophone Company vs. Phinney & Company and the appeal of Royal Bank of Canada vs. the King were also dismissed with costs. The latter grew out of the action of the government of New Brunswick to recover from the bank, trustee for Sir Herbert Holt and others, about $5,600 for stampage dues.

NEIGHBORLY KINDNESS.

Douglas Harbor, N. B., June 6.—The United Farmers of this place held a pie social and ice cream sale on Tuesday evening, May 31, at which the sum of $116.76 was realized. The proceeds were presented to Ward Hunter to assist him to rebuild his barn which he recently lost by fire. Mr. Hunter also lost most of his farming implements, a quantity of hay, a cow and calf and some feed and small articles. The sum of $100 was collected at Clark's Corners, Lakeville Corner and other places. This, with some other contributions, made the sum of $231.76 presented to Mr. Hunter.

YOUR LUXURIES.

(Vancouver Sun.)

During the single year 1919 the people of Canada spent $300,000,000 more for luxuries than was spent in the country for education since Confederation, according to a statistician employed by the government at Ottawa.
