POLITE MARLBORO ROBIN
THANKS DONOR FOR FOOD

(Boston Globe) Winsted's rope-jumping rattlesnake, Reading's talkative cats—these needs must be on the alert else their fame will vanish.
Marlboro's begging and thankful robin has made its appearance.
Here is how the Globe correspondent puts it: Residents of Main Street have taken considerable consolation lately, despite the winter season, in the presence of a robin in their vicinity. The bird is a large one and has been spending most of its time near the residence of John Brooks.
Mrs. Brooks feeds robin red breast every day, and robin red breast shows its appreciation by giving throat to whole bars of melody.
7-CENT CUTS TRAFFIC
ON PHILADELPHIA CARS

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—The total number of riders on Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company cars last month, with the seven-cent fare in effect, was 8,600,000 less than the number in December, 1919, at the five-cent rate, according to W. C.
Dunbar, Vice President of the company.
Mr. Dunbar also says that the sale of tickets at four for a quarter made the company's revenue last month exceed that of December, 1919, by $657, 589.
The record of diminishing riders, according to Mr. Dunbar, bears out the prediction of Thomas E. Mitten, President of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, who said a fare higher than a "basic five-cent rate" would cut down the number of profitable short riders.

TARIFF REPRISALS

(New York Times)

Congressmen at Washington who rushed through the House the burcombe Bill to "protect" the farmers learn that foreign countries may retal-iate against the United States by imposing high duties on her wool and hides. Canada may do something to hit back for the tax on wheat. Even France is said to be about to retaliate. How unreasonable! It much be indeed a "mechanical" animal that thus proposes to defend itself when attacked. So far as Congress is concerned, its attitude in this affair is a mixture. We know our selves to be so amiable that we think all foreigners must love us, no matter what we do. Why should they resent our looking after our own? If they feel hurt or threatened in the act, they ought not to lay it up against us; certainly they should do nothing which shows that they, too, are minded, at our expense, to look after their own. And can't they see that this hair-trigger tariff legislation is insincere—that it is voted for by representatives with a wink?

The House, with a grand flourish, will have "done something" for the farmer.
The Senate is counted upon to do something for common sense and for decent treatment of foreign nations. It is evident that all the loose talk about Americans taking care of herself and letting the rest of the world to hang has brought back some of the old notions about international commerce. We think we can sell without buying. We think we can throw clubs at other nations without danger of their being thrown back—or returning like so many boomerangs, to hit us in the head. But the era of isolation is over, whether we wish it or not. The United States cannot live isolated itself. It has the largest commitments in world trade, and has got to try to please its customers, not drive them away. To thing of taking down the old huck-nuck tariff must of other days is the wildest folly in these times of rapid fire commercial wars.

who exercised courage and seized the opportunities to branch out when others were pulling in their horns, and who is now pointed to as a leading citizen.

Is there not a lesson in all this at this time when pessimism is raging and retrenchment is becoming a fetish?

Has not the time come to ask whether courage will not be better than cowardice, whether the placing of contracts will not be better than cancellations, whether it will not be better to look beyond the present clouds and prepare for the sunshine that is bound to come by and by?

THE QUALITY MOST NEEDED BY AMERICAN business men a year and a half ago was courage. The quality most needed today is courage.

Did you ever reflect that most of the great fortunes in America have been made by men who courageously held on when others were giving up? Often they salvaged weaklings and the assets thus acquired later became of great value.

In panicky times the strong, by their courage, become stronger.

They have vision to look beyond the immediate clouds. They have faith that the sun will shine. They know that depression will give place to prosperity in due course. And when it did it was abundant and enterprise and enthusiasm.

Henry Clay Frick, who recently died leaving something like $125,000,000 (largely for public purposes), laid the foundation for his fortune when the panic of 1873 stampeded the men interested in the infant coke industry. Frick bought the interests of his partners and others who showed the white feather. They thought he was a fool, for he was not then selling under cost of production? Within a few years Frick's coke properties were netting him a profit of over a million dollars a year.

One by one Carnegie's early partners deserted the steel ship at times when it appeared to be sinking. Little Andrew stuck to the bridge undaunted. In his recently issued autobiography he tells how he tried to persuade the other partners to hold on, but how they saw nothing but ruin ahead. He never doubted that the sea would become calmer in due course. And when it did it was abundant and very profitable—galling for Carnegie.

John D. Rockefeller picked up some of his biggest fortunes in oil properties during times of acute depression, when the price obtainable for oil was unprofitable.
He had resolved to stick to oil through thick and thin, and when others of less backbone and less courage wanted to run away, they found him a willing buyer.

Almost every city and town and hamlet in America has some business man to whom the citizens point with pride, some man who had to wrestle with unnumerable obstacles in his earlier days, but
