McClary's Sunshine Furnace

Selecting the Correct Type of Furnace

Upon nothing else so much as the heating plant does the comfort, health and happiness of the dwellers in a home depend.

A heating plant which is successful in one house may not function well in another of a different type.

Then a great deal depends upon the installation. A good plant may be poorly installed and fail to properly heat the home.

The correct distribution of heat requires a proper knowledge of the laws governing air circulation. This circulation naturally varies greatly according to the plans of the building, its structure and location.

So it is important that the installation of a heating plant should receive the earnest thought and serious attention of the home builder.

A prudent man will take no chances at guesswork in selecting and installing his heating plant. He will consult with experts and be guided by their knowledge and experience, supplemented by his own good judgment.

It is not enough that he order a furnace to be installed.

He must be assured that the particular type of furnace to be installed will heat all the rooms in his home.

That it will be economical in its consumption of fuel by radiating the maximum amount of heat.

That the furnace will function at its best with the kind of fuel to be used.

That the furnace is properly installed by a qualified furnace man.

Pipe or One-Register (Pipeless)

FOR every type of building—dwelling, business or meeting house,

For every kind of fuel—there are twenty distinct varieties between Newfoundland and Yukon,

For every kind of climate—the changeable from sunny clear to damp and raw in Eastern Canada; the clear, biting, bracing cold of the Prairies and the moist chill of the Pacific winters,

—For every demand of efficiency and economy,

There is a model of McClary's Sunshine Furnace built to meet the very condition for which you need a furnace.

Not only is there a Sunshine model for every type of home and kind of fuel, but McClary's see to it that the Sunshine Furnace is properly installed to heat every room in the house.

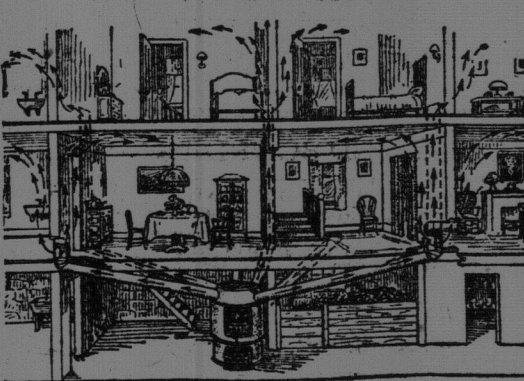

McClary's select a dealer in each town whom they know understands the problems of heating; upon whose judgment and ability they can depend.

Only dealers who can measure up to the McClary's standard of efficiency are selected to sell McClary's Sunshine Furnace.

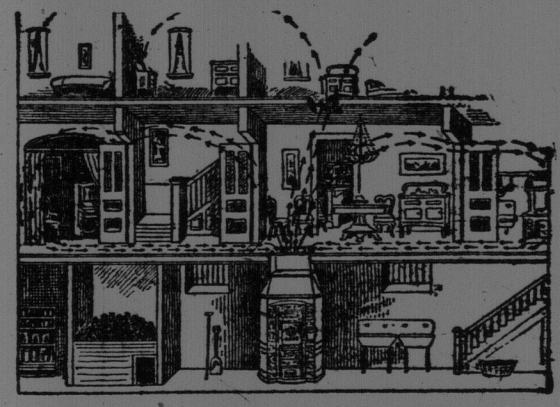

If a McClary's dealer tells you he can instal a One-Register (pipeless) Sunshine Furnace so that it will satisfactorily heat your home, you can depend upon it that it will do so when it is put in.

If he tells you that a One-Register (pipeless) furnace is not suitable for your home, you may be certain that, no matter what make it is, it will not suit your purpose.

Because McClary's not only design and build their Sunshine Furnaces well, but see that they are properly installed, is the reason why McClary's Sunshine Furnaces give satisfaction in over 50,000 Canadian homes from the Atlantic to the Pacific.
