lumbia. Is it to be wondered at that, while such a "joint occupation" as this "continues, England does not settle the question ? What, let us ask, could she gain, in the present state of things, by coming to a settlement ? gotiation, can be hoped for. Still, it is said the notice is a wir mea-sure—at least, a measure looking directly to war as its result. Is this really so ?— Certainly, the notice itself is not a "caller bell." Even the "Times" fully admits that. It is, then, at worst, only a preli-minary peaceful step. But does it go di-rectly to produce war ? Be it observed, after notice is given, we are still free as ever to pursue any policy we may elect. We may negotiate—we may rely on the operation, in our favour, of a wise and masterly inectivity—we may place part of the terrifory, or all of k, under a Ter-ritorial government. After notice, we may be no nearer war than we are how. But dgain : every 'Sear of 'point occu-pution," as it is termed, complicates the question between the two nations, and makes it harder of adjustment. The in-territory becomes larger every year. We send more citizens into the Wallamente whole land with new forts. England is sufficiently sagacious in sceing to her own interests, and emergetic in carrying them you. If she yees subst is our policy, will she not attempt to counteract it by similar means ? Build more forts—acquire more control over the Indians—sond more then here 3 I as he not afready doing it? Let he borderers on both sides come to blows, will not the flames of war involve both the countries ? Every day may add to the fael, instead of lessening it. The ulcer
