

NEW WAR SONG FOR BRITISH SAILORS.

The following selection, written by a midshipman on board of one of our ships, Admiral's Squadron, is quite popular throughout the fleet, and has found its way into the press. It shows, at least what the sailors think of the figure they cut. The song circulated quite freely abroad.

A NEW NAVAL SONG.

(Altered from Dibdin's, for the use of the disgusted English crews in the Bosphorus.)

Come, let us give our hats to dislodge our steer,
To set our iron rudder straight, and our stern
A-shake, by jill look, we should meet with a blow!

Our stars we shall quickly be order to show, Unless our oars are all shorn, quite a joke are we,

And our voices are ready, (Aside.)—Steady, boys, steady!

To sink and to thunder again and again!

For a sham we were sent to, and a sham we shall be!

Your John Turk, (to his coat,) has been counting so well,

Wrote to keep him at home, with his pipe and his puffing out, &c.

While the Russians are pitching his ships to Old Socrate's !

Then I thought in those times, when a fox showed his tail, that Britain cracked contending over the lists

With herself or a friend, didn't matter a dum,

She was ready to fight while she counted a stamp-

Up, and when she had won,

They'd heard of our Nelsons, and Rodney's, and Blackett's.

And they think, too old "Pant" never shivered or

Shook, but now see how saving the Queen,

And our poor Country abiding's sole A—a—n—t

Teethless oak are our ships; quite a joke are we men?

And our rulers quail ready,

To look behind again again?

SOUTHERN METHOD OF COOKING RICE.

With it thoroughly in cold water; I have a pot of water, and every bit of it (the) boiling—add a few spices, and a few onions, and a little salt, then off, the water as close as you can;

without stirring the rice; set the pot on some coals and cover it up; let it remain twenty minutes, then fish out. Each grain, by this method, will be sep'ated, and will have its individuality, and its taste, and its nutritions.

Those who prefer a mushy, mushy porridge like me, me, boil it longer and ne'er get to steam it.

To Doctor Beddoes.—A simple and easy method of curing this most some termperer has been de-covered. It consists in the liquid from the ripe encounter on the bedpost of your bed-post, which they secrete.

"When shall we three meet again?"—at the tip,

Down, or in the luggage train end, when they all run into one another at the junction?—Punch

A Frenchman, stopping at a tavern, asking for Junction,—"There is no such person here," said the landlord, "but a person I saw, but he never was here."—"Well?" answered mine-host, "that is big?"—"Ah, very, you are in the right

I mean!"—Tremendous!—A friend of ours, and consequently a wit, has been pleased to observe that certain M.P.'s have been so much used to "statuting" at the Intervent, that even now they find it impossible to keep their seats—Dialect.
