Royal Kennebeccasis Yacht Club Off on Monday Morning-List of the Yachts Taking Part, asis Yacht Squadron leaves its headquarters at Millidgeville on its annual river cruise of seven days. While the event has not been as much advertised as formerly, yet this is no indication that little interest is being taken in it. Quite on the contrary, the yachtsmen are anticipating fully as delightful a sojourn on the river as on any former occasion of a similar nature, and

There will doubtless be the usual number of yachts in line, the Canada flying the Commodore's flag, as Mr. Fred Heans will of course have charge of his own boat. There is little probability of any visiting yachts taking part in the cruise, although since this writing some outside owners may have acquainted Secretary Ruel of their intention of joining the fleet.

The fleet will sail only as far as Gagetown this year and probably into the Grand Lake. The first stop may be at Oak Peint Monday night. If so, a jubilation will be held there as was done on previous years. The metto with the yachtsmen this year is "take your time and enjoy life." They don't intend to scud along as if racing, and as their trip is shortened censiderably they can afford to "hoist down dem sails" and anchor at an early hour, giving more time for fun ashore.

Following is a partial list of the yachts to take part in the cruise, and some of the people who will sail in them:

There's a lovelorn swain in Milford whose girl has given him the rinkey-dink, or in more intelligible language she does not dote upon him quite as much as she used to do-and this is why. Last Sunday he invited her to go a 'rowing on the placid waters of Indiantown harbor, for these waters were placed at that time, and she accepted. Determined to give the girl one of the best times she ever had in her the young man from Milford sallied forth for some refreshments. He bought two bottles of beer in a Main street store and four fruit squares in another shop. Thus

Monday morning the Royal Kennebec- | equipped he hurried back to the scene of embarkation where he had left the one for whom he vowed he'd leave his happy home. She was there but the boat wasn't. A bold, bad man had stolen it away while her sweetheart was "grubbing up" for the trip, and perhaps would have stolen the girl too had she not puckered her pretty mouth so when he made off with the excursion craft. Then a scene ensued, one of those lovers quarrels, when she accused him of being the cause of all the disappointment etc. He felt very badly hurt at her unkind words, and as she left in a huff he grabbed up the beer and squares and made off to the stores where he had purchased them. With a "tearful voice" he plead to have the edibles and drinkables taken back and money refunded. This was done, but it will take a great deal more coaxing and explaining before he reinstates himself in the fair good graces of his girl, for at present she can't say that she likes him a whole lot.

OUR YANKER COUSINS. How They Startle the Native-Born With Their Free and Essiness.

Now that the American tourist trave has set in natives are being astounded right and left by some of the queer customs of the visiting ones. St. John is quite un-American in many ways. While just the epposite of English, slow-plodding Halifax in a general way, there is lacking that spirit of free-and-easy, or perhap Bohemianism, which stamps every true born Yank. So when these southern neighbors of ours land here and introduce a lot of their new fads, conservative-minded folk stand aside, either amused or astonish pretty New York young ladies were taking in the sights of the town, having arrived only an hour or so before. They were dressed in suits of that fashionable smoky black cloth and shod with mannish last boots. In fact they were ideally accounted for touring. When opposite the bootblack chair at Puddington & Merritt's corner one of the couple thought she needed a shine, so without hesitation she jumped into the big brass-ornamented seat and planted her boots firmly on the form for polishing.

The bootblack was so greatly taken back that it was several moments before be found his speech. Then he asked incredulously, "Shine Miss?"

"Certainly", replied the Yankee girl, 'you don't imagine I'm sitting here on exibition do you?"

So the lad plied the brushes vigorously while a typical open-mouthed St. John crowd gaped on.

Then the other Miss had her boots made prilliant, the bootblack receiving a quarter for his exertions. He was after wards heard to remark. "Hully gee, I guess I'll stick out a new sign, "Ladies 'er speshulty".

valking without headwear has lasted longer than new ideas usually do across t border, for on Wednesday evening quite a party of American young ladies enjoyed the band concert, and walked about town with their stray tresses fluttering in the breeze. Several took a car ride over the circuit bareheaded.

Over on Bay Shore one day this week a half dozen visiting ladies and gentleman from stars and stripes land indulged in a game of water baseball, so popular at the big beaches. A medium sized rubber ball was used and a flat bat, the players stand ing shoulder deep in the water There were no bases to be run, or rather "swum", the game being nothing more than "popping up flies" to those in the watery field. game was interestingly watched by the other bathers, and beachers.
