NOTES AND NEWS.

NOVA SCOTIA. A young man, employed in the Bridgetown foundry, had one of his feet badly burned by the molten iron dropping over horse just over the eye.

A man named Martin LeBlanc, of Tusket Wedge, while at work on the wales of a new vessel in Jas. A. Hatfield's shipyard in Tusket, on Saturday last, accidentally fell from the scaffolding to the ground a distance of sixteen feet. He was taken up apparently dead; but under the management of Dr. Kirby, who was near at hand, he gradually recovered, and became conscious of what had happened. For some time past Edward Dulhanty, Esq., of Port Hood, has been engaged in earching for coal at South West Mabou. After having bored the solid rock a distance of nine feet, he struck a seam of anthracite coal six feet thick. This fine anthracite coal six feet thick. This line bed of coal is a distance of four miles from Port Hood, the nearest shipping place, and it is quite practicable to build a railroad to that place, the only obstacle in the way being a small eminence called the Rocky Ridge, and this can be tunnelled at a small expense.

There is a proposal before the British Government that trees shall be planted on the principal streets of London. Piccadilly, Pall Mall, Regent street, Oxford street, the Edgeware road, Portland st., Langham place, and the fine sweep of the Bayswater road, from the Marble Arch to Nottinghill, are named in this connection, and the result in time would rival the Boulevards of Paris.

A suit is now pending in Paris be ween Don. Francisco D'Assis and Isabella, ex-Queen of Spain. The plaintiff, D'Assis, has applied for an order oblig-ing his consort to place in the hands of a receiver a sufficient sum to secure the regular payment of certain annuities which are chargable on her estate, to himself, the Prince of the Austrias, and each of the four infantas. He accuses his wife of squandering her fortune in po-litical enterprises and extravagant amusements. She was, he says, worth a million francs a year, when she came to age, and does it, and has been rewarded for doing it. During his tour in Australia Mr. Mathews made the acquaintance of an eld gentleman who had gone to the antipodes in search of health, and was respectful, or, at least, behaved kindly towards him. Afterward, in the course of his travels, Mr. Mathews met the old gentleman again, and finding him very ill indeed, made him the object of more attention than ever. At last the old gentleman died, and from his will it appears that he has let Mr. Charles Mathews an annuity of between £500 and £600. For the sake of old gentlemen in general, this fact cannot be made too public. It may tend to secure them a little extra politeness, of which they are often in need.

Sentenced for Life. The final proceedings against the Bank of England forgers witnessed a singular display of penitence on the part of the prisoners. The case having been summed up by the prosecution, the counsel for the defence announced that he felt that it would be useless, after the evidence that would be useless, after the evidence that had been given, for him to address the jury on behalf of the prisoners, and they were accordingly allowed to speak for themselves. They all admitted their guilt and begged for mercy, although they knew that they were deserving of none. When the jury returned with a verdict finding them all guilty, Austin Bidwell briefly addressed the Court saying that he could only speak of time wasted and of opportunities thrown away, and this he supposed would not avail him, and therefore he should not press the application. George Bidwell said that, so far as he was concerned, he did not ask for mercy, but he did ask for mercy for his brother. He was twelve years younger than himself, and he might never have been in the position he now was but for him. He had just maried a young wife. He was young,

Big now was but for him. He had just may received the main ried a young wife. He was young, and he entreated the Court to have mercy upon him and give him another chance. The prisoners Noyes and Macdonnell followed in penitent speeches asking for mercy, after which the Justice addressed the prisoners, reminding them of the enormity of their crime, which he thought was aggravated by the fact that they were men possessed of education, who could speak several languages, and who must have been well aware of the nature and effect of what they were doing, and the serious shock that was likely to be given to commercial credit by the course they were pursuing. He was unable to conceive a worse case, and he therefore felt it to be his duty to order each of them to be kept in penal servitude for life, and also that each of them should pay one-fourth of the expenses of the prosecution. The prisoners, who exhibited a dejected and downcast appearance, were then removed.

In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J.
