

inquiry tending so remarkably to sustain the opinions expressed by him in Danson's work, more than thirty years ago. These opinions, then far advanced and much contested, have now been overtaken and confirmed by the conclusions of inductive science.