Its Distinctive Features Were Very Familiar to Melville Washington.

J. G. Kerr was presiding Judge at the Division Court held in Merlin yes-terday. One of the cases furnished considerable amusement. James Ross owned some turkeys which had migrated over to Mrs. Freeman's place. Mrs. Freeman, who is the wife of one of the men implicated in the Rankin murder, claimed that she had raised the turkeys. Melville Washington was the star witness for the

GHOST YELLED

The "Spirit of Pocahontas" Screamed Like a Real Woman in Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., January 9 .- William Brown gave a spiritualistic seance last night and it ended in a row, when John Davies, a noted football player, tackled the "spirit of Pocahontas." Brown's seances have been so remarkable that hundreds of skeptics have paid money to see the "manifestations." Davies and a crowd of young fellows determined has night to solve the mystery. When the lights were turned low, a graceful figure, clothed in a halo of phosphorescence, ghided into a tiny ray of light. The "ghost" said she was Pocahontas, Then a dark figure shot over the heads of the first two rows of startled spectators and a lusty human voice exclaimed:

"I've got her, boys!"

It was Davies and he had tackled the "ghost" and "ghost" and Davies fell in a heap. The "ghost" screamed.

The faithful piled on Davies in the darkness while Davies' friends rushed to his assistance. Ten of his comrades and himself were pited against four times that many spiritualists and claimed:

Spoken of as Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions in the Northwest.

Toronto, Jan. 9 .- Owing to the death of Rev. Dr. Robertson, the Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions for Manitoba and the Northwest, one of the most important positions in the gift of the church, must be filled. During the last two days Presbyterian ministers have been darkness while Davies' friends rushed to his assistance. Ten of his compared witness addressing Acting Judge Kerr, "that I familiarized myself with those turkeys and I would like to explain so that your honor can understand distinctly without any hesitation." Then the witness went into voluminous details on how they had set turkey eggs under a turkey hen and a chicken hen and how a certain turkey had been hatehed, which the witness knew by its features but not by its feathers.

The court found that the turkeys belonged to Mr Ross. S. B. Arnold for plaintiff, F. C. Nelles, contra.

The chamber was one, is most up-to-date. There are crowded with ladies in brilliant coszens. All the ministers were present, except, of course, Hon. Mr. Harty, who has resigned to contest Kingston for the commons.

The Lieutenant-Governor drove up from Government house in a closed carriage, owing to the inclemency of the weather, and was received by an escort of 100 men of the Queen's Own Rifles. He entered the chamber preeeded by the sergeant-at-arms bear-ing the mace, the crown upon which has been changed to the Tudor pattern. His honor read the speech from the throne. The address alluded to the recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of York, the satisfactory character of the lumbering industry, forest re-serves, mining industry, settling of agricultural lands, new asylums, technical education, agricultural success and encouragement of beet sugar in-

The speech concludes that the Gov-ernment will introduce several mea-sures, including a measure "concern-ing the sale of intoxicating liquors." After the Lieutenant-Governor had read his speech and retired, Speaker Evanturel announced the receipt of the resignation of Hon. Wm. Harty, the Kingston representative, Then followed the introduction of new members—Hon. J. T. Garrow for West Huron, Col. Leys for London, and John Lee for East Kent.

Elks' teeth were highly valuable as ornaments by the Indians. In an old burial cave in Montana a large numof them were recently found. Fifteen handred were attached to one cloak in which a body had been wrapped.
