OUR BOYS AND GIRLS. THE NEW BOY.

"You had better eat meat, you know, Rodgers," said Monks.
"Monks is a terror," whispered another, "you had better,"
"I can't," exposulated Rodgers.

"Catholics can't eat meat on a Fri day."

"But you'll have to," continued Monks.

Monks.

'I shan't," was the quiet answer.

'See here," said Monks, 'if you don't, I'll make you. We shall stand none of your bigotry here."

Monks reflected, made a mental estimation of the newcomer's fighting powers, and seemed to hesitate, then stammered, "Well, I would, only I don't like to hurt you."

Rodgers smiled. He was a new comer to Seaforth's boarding school. Seaforth's, you must knew, was one of the most successful schools in the It was a Presbyterian school but professed to be perfectly impartia in matters of religion. To this academy Willie Rodgers was sent by a father, who was ambitious that his son should carve his name on the future history of Australia. Mrs. Rodgers ventured to expostulate. She had been so careful of her son's training from the cradle that she looked with some anxiety to the prospect of his liv-ing in such an un Catholic atmosphere as a Presbyterian boarding school Her husband was inflexible.

"My dear," he said to her, " you shut your eyes to Willie's best inter ests; the boy has talent, remarkable talent, and it would be unfair to him, as well as to ourselves, if we were to deprive bim of the advantages of such education as may be had at Sea forth's. There are already plenty of Catholics there. Major Hardy told me last summer he was sending his two boys there.

So Willie was sent to Seaforth's ; late in the term, too, which caused every-one to talk of the new comer. He had been put on to bowl at cricket the first day, and took Monks' wicket the first over. Everyone was delighted, except Monks; for Monks was a bit of a bully, and was, in conse quence, secretly hated by the boys.

His first night the new comer knelt down by his bedside to say his night prayers, as was his unfailing custom. There was a titter in the dormitory. Someone threw a pillow at him, another hit him with a sponge; but he didn't appear to mind. Monks hit him with his slipper. That hurt. 'Twas mean, too. Rodgers seemed vexed when he looked round, and Monks pretended to be engaged with his tooth brush, but the night prayers were finished with-out further interruption. This was the beginning of it, but the real trouble came on Friday.

On Friday the new-comer found that no provision had been made for anywho did not wish to eat meat. The dishes came one after another, but, with the exception of some vegetables and a potato, he found there was nothing he could eat. This was hard for a hungry youth like himself. Potatoes and vegetables are never satisfactory in such a case. It was still harder to see his neighbors on all sides watching his evident discomfort. They were staring and sneering at health and appetite. He felt the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning on his cheeks and at so much attention being noted in the shame burning noted in t much attention being paid to him; yet it no more occurred to him to eat mear than to cut off his head. At length Monks, the biggest boy at the attempt failed ingloriously as we have

After dinner Rodgers found himself in the midst of a crowd of boys regarding him with feelings of mixed wonder and curiosity, as the boy who "cheeked Monks and refused to eat on Friday.

"What a silly ass he is." he over heard one say.

"Oh, yes, a little bigot," responded another; "this is the first time a Catholic refused to take what he got on a Friday. We'll soon teach him

"Oh, let him alone," said a bigger boy, who just joined the group. will soon get tired of his abstinence. He will eat meat like the rest, next Friday. Let the youngster alone. It's not quite fair to a new-comer.

The majority of the boys began to feel ashamed of themselves, and hurried off to their cricket and tennis, and leaving their recent victim in peace. He epeated more than once: "He will eat meat like the rest, next Friday." Why, what a stupid lot of day." Why, what a stupid lot of duffers they are, he thought, not to know that a Catholic can't eat meat on a Friday. But I wonder if it's true that the other Catholics here eat meat. Here comes Hardy, I'il ask him.

Hardy had been a distant, former acquaintance, and had acted as the new-comer's patron since his arrival at Seaforth's. Great, then, was Rodgers' surprise when this young

What the dickens did you want making such a fool of yourself in the refectory to day? The sooner you drop such nonsense, and do as every one else does, the better. I thought you were a fellow of some sense. "Surely, Hardy, you don't mean to say you ate meat to-day, Friday." Why, you little idiot, do you suppose one can live on potatoes and bread. One can abstain on Friday at home if he likes, but in Rome one must do as the Romans do. Have a little sense in future, Rodgers."

"And you call yourself a Catholic,

Hardy?"
There was such a degree of contempt in the voice and gesture of the new-comer, that Hardy blushed for every shame. Muttering something about narrow minded bigotry, he hurried away to hide his confusion.

As Rodgers knelt by his bed that night he was assailed with quite a shower of stockings, sponges, pillows, etc. Without showing the slighest alarm or irritation he finished his prayers. Many whispered from their beds, "The new comer is a plucky fellow at any rate." Henceforth he was seldom disturbed at his devotions.

There was trouble yet in store for him. He found next day that many of his friends looked coldly on him; some even refused to let him join in their games, alleging that they wanted no "bigots" there. He found a few, indeed—and in every school such a few will be found—who showed him some kindness, and defended him from the worst of his enemies, though they persisted in advising him to give in. But what grieved him above all was that he had to suffer most from his fellow Catholics. They persecuted him most unrelentingly, and tried to make his life as miserable as they could. They little knew the strong character they had to deal with Rodgers weathered this storm. He He had many qualities that endeared him to the school boy heart. Sharp and quick of intellect in class, in the play ground he promised to become a champion. He was overflowing, too, with good nature, which no amount of annoyance could stamp out. Before many days had passed he was popular among an ever widening circle of friends. Friday came, however, bringing with it a fresh load of

There was some excitement in the refectory as all eyes were fixed on the new comer to see if he would stick to his colors. The soup was passed to him.

"Go it, Rodgers, or 'twill be worse for you," said Monks.

"Don't be an ass, Rodgers," Hardy shouted up from the end of the table. Some whispered, in friendly tones "Just take a little on your plate, it will do no harm.

He passed on the soup untouched to his neighbor. Monks looked angry. Hardy said something ungentlemanly. Some thought "it was cheeking the school;" others laughed, but from that moment the new comer was more pop-ular than before. The bigger boys, who had up to this regarded the whole affair with indifference, did not con ceal their admiration for the plucky youngster.

"He's a bigoted little chap," they said, "but he has plenty of grit. If they let him alone he will do just as the others after a time.'

But Willie Rodgers did not do as the others. Friday followed Friday the systematic persecution from the clique which seemed bent on his conversion never ceased, but neither did his resolution ever falter for an in-They tormented him in many ways, striving to prevent his getting vegetables or bread on fast days, not passing him the meat on other days, still his good humor did not forsake him. They called him nicknames to which he replied with interest. They cut endless jokes at his expense, he joined in the laugh. They did their best to sit on him at cricket, but he

Strange to say they never tried to make him attend their Divine service. table, took it upon himself to compel the new-comer to eat his meat. His tempt would be; perhaps it was only the fasting that wounded their amount propre. But, nevertheless, scarce riday passed without its trials.

Finally Lent came, bringing with it its numerous fast days. Rodgers grew rather thin, as time went on, from the constant worry and abstin ence, but his spirit never wavered, hi cheerfulness remained constant. his letters home there was not a single line of complaint of the treatment h was receiving. In his class he made steady progress, and at cricket it was whispered he would be one of the "eleven's" bowlers in the coming

Good Friday proved to be the last day of his trials. On that day he ab-solutely abstained from everything except a piece of dry bread at breakfast and dinner. It was rather a feast day at Seaforth's. In the refectory the boys were watching his table very quietly and intently. It was known that Monks had resolved to make him break the fast. For this purpose he had changed his place at table, and seated himself opposite Rodgers.

"You're not looking well to day, odgers," he began. "You're eating Rodgers," he began. "You're eating too much lately, I'm afraid." He sneered at the slice of bread that lay on Rodger's soup plate.

"It is very kind of you, Monks, to take such an interest in my health, replied Rodgers with perfect good "So you fast to-day, do you? This is a feast day here, you know, you must join us."

"No, I shan't." "You'll try a slice of this ham, won't you. I can recommend it."

"No, thanks, Monks. Better attend to yourself."
"Well, if you don't eat, you'll drink.' So saying, Monks inverted the half filled soup tureen over Rodgers' plate. The soup flowed over on the tablecloth and on Rodgers' clothes. This was too much even for the new comer's patience. Without a word he rose to Spohr's mother was an excellent his feet, caught the soup plate, and judge of music, but no musician.

emptied its scalding contents over his tormentor, then, leaning across the table struck the bully with all his force in the face. There was never such a scene wit nessed in Seaforth's before. For an instant there was a death-like silence, all eyes riveted on Rodgers, as he stood erect, with pale cheek and flashing eye, confronting the bully he had so deservedly punished. Then such a cheer! Willie Rodgers had become the hero of the school.

After dinner the boys crowded round him, clapping him on the back, and overwhelming him with congratula-tions. The captain of the house approached, and shaking hands with him, said :

"You are a plucky fellow, Rodgers. You did quite right in punishing Monks. We have been treating you most caddishly, and are very sorry for it. In the future anyone that gives you trouble will have to answer for it to me. Three cheers for the new-comer, boys!" And three such hearty cheers rang out as had seldom been heard within the college walls before Such an honor had not been conferred in Seaforth's for years. When Rodgers became captain of the school, a little later, new boys al-ways wondered why he had a special cover at table on Fridays, and smaller boys never tire telling how he defied the whole school and punished a bully in the golden days of old .- Irish Messenger.

CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN

Feel, young man, that your day i in your own making, and try to find vourself out just as soon as you can. That is, make up your mind that you were born to do semething, and go a it and do that something just as soon as possible. There is nothing that the tellers of bad futures for a boy so soon forget as their own words, when they find that these do not turn out right The "I told you sos," and the "I always saids," never show their faces unless their predictions are verified. Therefore, young man, make a promise in your own mind with yourself. when yon hear said of yourself, or know it is said of you, that you will never be this or that, that you will make of him who said it a false prophet. Set your work in life and try

A growing tree is not thinking of the shadow it will cast. It is growing to bear its fruits or furnish the timber of its being. The shadow grows in consequence. And it is so with an nonest, good life. The inspiration of it is not the desire of others' applause, of the growth of personal influence but the wish to do the duty of the day ecause it is duty. It is not by mere brains that good, enduring influence is secured. Character which inspires confidence, with respect, and by the very laws of life tells on others—this is the force which a good man directs. But self-conceit, personal vanity, and over confidence in one's self are not consistent with this character. there be unaffected modesty behind obvious power and respect is won; and respect implies influence of the best kind.

Stick to It!

A habit of application is, it would be safe to say, of as much importance to any great man as is his genius. Not that any amount of application can ake a dull man brilliant : but that without steady application a brilliant far as anything that he is likely to accomplish is concerned. Perseverance is only the right hand of genius. Something is breathed into a man at his birth-a divine fire-which makes great things possible to him, while to his brother in the next cradle they would be impossible forever. having received this divine fire, he must give it fuel. It is the sign that ho must work more, and not less than his fellows; and so there is no one thing so remarkable in the history of our great men as their habits of prodigious application.

The Duty of Being Cheerful.

We speak much of the duty of mak ing others happy. "No day should pass," we say, "on which we do not pass," we say, "on which we do not put a little cheer into some heart, make the path a little smoother for some one's tired feet, or help one faint-ing robin into its nest again." But we are not accustomed to think of the duty of being happy ourselves. the one duty is taught in the Bible as clearly as the other. Jesus said His les should have tribulation in the world, but He said in the same sen tence: "Be of good cheer."

That is the problem which is set before us as Christians. We are to live cheerful. The fact is, however, that not all Christians are cheerful -some are habitually uncheerful. Others are cheerful only at times, when the sun shines and all things go well with

The truth is, there are in the ordinary life a thousand pleasant things to one which is unpleasant. It is a shame, therefore, to let the one roughness or pain spoil us for all the gladness of a thousand good things, the one discordant note mar for us all the music of the grand symphony.

Success and Failure. If by success we mean the full ac complishment of an end, the actual reaping of a harvest of results, then it is undoubtedly true that the higher and nobler the purpose the rarer will be the success. If we aim to relieve a man's hunger we can quickly succeed in the easy task, but if we aim to inspire him with a desire to earn his own bread the work is more difficult and the success far more problematical. It we would restrain a thief from rob. bery, the prison bars and locks insure success, but if we would make an honest man of him, our task is a complex one, and success may be afar off. We undertake to teach a child to read. If with requisite effort we follow up our task, we are successful, but if we aspire to raise the educational standard of our community how arduous the task, how uncertain the result, how questionable the success!

The low man sees a little thing to do, Sees it and does it; The high man, with a great thing to pursue, Dies ere he knows it.

Is his life, then, a failure? No; let us never imagine that any high purpose, any noble thought, any generous emotion, any earnest effort, is ever lost. We may never witness its growth, we may not live to gather its fruit or even to see its blossoms, but we may safely trust that somewhere and at some time the harvest will be abundant, and success, long hidden, shall become apparent.

The reputation achieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only in Canada, but throughout the world, rests upon a very solid basis, which may be summed up in two words—sterling merit. The Enterprise has had occamerit. sion to investigate a number of cures effected by this medicine, and knows that in some instances at least these cures were wrought after other medicines had failed even to give relief. Recently another cure came under our notice that cannot fail to increase the popularity of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills n the locality in which it occurred, and as we can vouch for the facts, it may well bring hope to sufferers else-

Mr. Walter H, Johnson is one of the best known residents of the northern sides in the town of Caledonia, where he keeps a hotel, and also runs a stage that carries passengers and mail between that town and Liverpool, a distance of some thirty miles. Mr. Johnson was in Bridgewater recently, on which occasion he gave a reporter of this paper the following facts: About three years ago he was taken very ill. He had the best of medical attendance but make very little progress towards recovery, and the doctor told him there was very little hope that he would be able to return to his former work The trouble appeared to have located itself in his kidneys, and for eight weeks or more he was confined to b He suffered greatly from constant pains in the back, his appetite became impaired, and his constitution generally appeared to be shattered. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure so many forms of disease is that they act directly upon the blood and nerves, thus eaching the root of the trouble.
