TWO

Published by permission of P. J. Kenedy & 44 Barclay Street, New York. HAWTHORNDEAN

A STORY OF EVERY DAY LIFE

BY MRS. CLARA M. THOMPSON

CHAPTER XXII.-CONTINUED

The physician was there before her, and with her mother had succeeded in bringing her out of a pro-She attack of fainting. tracted her blue eyes and put out er hand eagerly to Mrs. Benton, as if she would be once more taken to her heart; then, with a motion of

"I must tell you," she whispered as Mrs. Benton stooped to her pillow, wailing, like a dirge ran theorem. after all had retired, "I must tell every page. It was an unfathomable you, I am going to die. I have felt mystery to her even, when she came the chill of death creeping over me to a withered bunch of violets among Sheridan. I have a great deal to do; I have put it off, not because I was undecided; my decision was made months since, but—," she for many weeks. I must see Father hesitated, "I may tell you, I was afraid my motives for baptism, which he urged so solemnly upon me, might be mingled with earthly love. Her thin, white hands covered her as she continued : You may tell him when I am gone, why I did not sooner listen to his earnest words for my soul's good." As she spoke, the tears came slowly dropping from "It was because her closed eyelids. I could not help it, indeed I could not. I may say it to you, my more she added, pressing to than mother," her lips the dear hand that now held "he was so kind to me, taught hers: me so sweetly, led me along so gently -indeed I could not help loving him-and it will do no harm now.

My poor, dear child !" said Mrs. Benton, kissing her fondly, and parting her disordered locks. By the instinct which God had given the tender hearted, she read the tale of unrequited love through these broken sentences; read the fact that Dr. Nelson had unwittingly won the young girl's affections, and her fond neart ached for the sufferer. The countenance of the girl brightened as she felt that her secret was known to her companion. "You see, my had read the letter.

own friend," she added, "thoughts of life and love must not press in and mingle with my dying bour; your presence alone will be necessary when I take the vows of a Christian. I feel that I can live but a few days, and O, let me do what I have to do, quickly and peacefully." Her look was sadly imploring.

It shall be as you wish, Alice, replied Mrs. Benton, "calm your spirit by trust in your dear Lord, who never faileth those who cast their care upon Him. I will send for Father Sheridan at once, and for the rest, you shall not be disturbed.

his.

"And you will tell him when I am gone," urged the invalid, the faint the pink tings passing over her check; he might otherwise feel hurt, that I refused his presence at such a time, when he has been so interested of relief; "a winter together would in bringing me to this sacrament." 'All shall be as you wish, dear, replied her friend, kissing the pallid daughter of his own; his son's brow. Mrs. Benton's errand was in marriage does not promise much brow. Mrs. Benton's errand was in part a difficult one, to open first to the mother, the resolve of her child (perhaps not unexpected, and yet in (perhaps not unexpected, and yet in all cases sudden at the last) to leave the religion of her parents, and to the religion of her parents, and to hear the blame of undue influence : but these were the lightest part of her lover across the prairie. To keep Dr. Nelson from her task.

Alice's room, where he had a right as claimed, as her quick thought took her physician, was more difficult. in the contents of the letter her Her husband had often said, that mother had put into her hand, saydom spoke, and calmly and peacefully fell asleep in her baptismal inno-cence. After the burial, Mrs. Benton returned the crucifix to Dr. Nelson and reposed in him the secret intrusted to her by the dead.

"It can do me no harm now," he and the words sank deep into Leigh. said sadly, repeating Mrs. Benton's words-' but I could have sympa-thized with her-yes, I think I could ton's heart. It was evident to him-self that he did not fully trust Marion; perhaps the fervor and strength of his own affection made loved her very dearly, but it would have been only the remnants, him more doubtful of hers. not the dear first love she gave me Ab! she is far better with that love weeks at this time, a fine grown which is eternal and unchangeable young man, nearly as tall as his father, with his mother's brown eyes, to go direct from her baptism to the embrace of her dear Lord, what could and Rosine's golden hair. He was a elip.

we ask for her !" The mourning mother brooded mystery to her even, when she came its leaves, with the initials, J. N., and Willie; the great growing west was his Eldorado. He turned and an-

> CHAPTER XXIII. THE SISTERS

Marion and her lover had settled before she left home, and her mother down, after the first flush of their betrothal, "a heap like old folks," Sobriety said, as in absence came the regular letter, and when present the regular visit, and always the regular newspaper, which Maricn studied with great diligence.

Rosine had heard of the engage ment in her city home, and talked it over with Colonel Hartland, who pronounced Leighton as promising a young man as he had met for years. not come to Athlacca. It was with a heavy heart Leigh-But the business-like courtship ton returned to his now lonely life, when the last wave of the white not to be continued unbroken; late in the autumn came a pressing letter from Colonel Hartland, urging his signal disappeared with the cetreat. friend to allow Marion to pass the ing steamer. His energetic and untiring nature could only be satisfied winter at the east. He was coming to St. Louis on government business, and would bring her back with him. It was only right, he said, that she occupy.

Marion was welcomed by Colonel should have a few glimpses of life before taking her place among the matrons. Mr. Benton and his wife Hartland's family, not as a stranger, but for Rosine's sake, like one looked at each other wistfully, as if longing to themselves; and but few days passed, when with her pushing nature she had impressed even Mrs. waiting for a question, when they What do you think of it, Lucy?" Hartland with a sense of her energy he said, leaning towards her, and clasping her hand in his; "it is hard, and power; to her sister she made known the state of things at Ingle to ask your only remaining daughter. wood, gave her a description of "It is not that alone makes m Leighton, caricatured Dr. Nelson hesitate, Philip; while I have you I and talked so much about herself, as can never be lonely. I am thinking to leave such an impression of her importance upon Rosine's mind, as separation and contact with the orld might be the best test of her to lead her to wonder how she could very well be spared from Athlacca. love for Mr. Leighton." 'Better now than after marriage, 'Ross," she said, a little reproachquickly replied Mr. Benton, "I have often doubted the depth and endurfully, after noting for one week in silence, the pet ways and fond ex ance of her love for him, but never pressions of Docter Hartland toward her sister, "I told you without re-Perhaps it would be well to leave serve all about Horatio, our engagedecision entirely with Marion, ments and plans, and you have never said the wife; "such a visit might even hinted to me that Dr. Hartland, or Ned, as he bids me call him, benefit her in many ways, and be a is a lover of yours, and that you are comfort to Rosine. Yes," replied the father, in a tone as good as engaged."

"What possibly put that into your head ?" replied Rosine, with be wholesome for both the girls. It is really a pity that Hartland has no eyes dilated with surprise, and with a start and almost a scream. is old enough to be-not quite my comfort ; I trust the Doctor, if he father, as he once said, but he is ever marries, will do better.' fifteen years older than I, and never Mrs. Benton answered only with a had a thought or dream of me except glowing, from a sharp canter with Marion, with a slight touch of sarcasm in her tone. "No," replied Rosine, hurt by the "O, beautiful! glorious!" she extone and the implied suspicion; "never, I love him to be sure; how the other held the strands of the yet sffaire."

THE CATHOLIC RECORD

How supremely silly " replied "Can't you tie a knot as can't Marion. "You worry yourself about because she has a Mrs. hitched to untie ?" said Rice, looking quizzically. trifles with an intensity worthy of her name!" untie?" said Rice, looking quizzheary at Marion." You know thar's many olin". Dr. Nelson. He was scrupulous to a degree; tormenting himself about little atoms of conduct, and would hardly trust himself to look at me, The young couple blushed crimson or speak to me, after my engagement; ceased his visits almost entirely, and made himself observed by every one; underwent all kinds of self imposed taken it because Shirley penance, to punish himself for fall-Harold was at home for a few ing in love with me."

Mamma writes as if papa were very fond of him," said Rosine.

extremely hungry, but she could not Mercy, yes !" replied Marion forbear thinking longingly of a supper table spread with hot things. "I never saw him take filled with high hopes and great any one as he did to him. expectatione, having chosen his pro-fession as civil engineer, and was determined, with the strength of a powerful will, to be among the first therein. He had made warm friends in St. Louis and he scoward Marine's there's country doctor's wife! What would Shirley ba doing? casionally Shirley took a great inter est in their housekeeping. Shirley was still trimming the hat. in St. Louis, and he scorned Marion's there's only one thing worse - a desire to go east; he never cared to between the black bow and this red desire to go east; he never cared to see any thing east but Rcsine and like to be the lady of a notable city silk rose. Three-fifty for that snippy flower-simple robbery ! But she added, pinching physician," she added, pinching Rosine, "the first of the faculty; and noyed Marion by asking her if, when she was Mrs. Governor of Illinois, effort, were I a Protestant, as the tcoshe would use her influence to give wife of a popular preacher or a him the laying out of the railroads bishop, but a country doctor's or what you mean," said Jessica. "But George would vote for it, and it has through the State. A little depres-sion came over Marion a few days must be devoid of ambition, surely !" an air-how do you do it Shirley ?" Rosine did not reply, her mind was had supper, dear ?" she said. was relieved by even this symptom of wandering back through the two eart; for it had been a surprise to years of separation, and the reflec-Shirley seemed to dimpled face and made a grimace. " How changed !" her how, with the chosen object to be | tion, left behind, there should be such strike her dumb; she feared they readiness for a separation. Horatio could never come together again as and Harold accompanied her on her when they were children. In Marion's way as far as Chicago, where they breast was something of the same were to meet Colonel Hartland, who thought, "How changed i" but they by some change of plan was to go to were both mistaken ; time had not that city instead of St. Louis, as at changed, but only developed their the borrid place since morning. first proposed, and therefore could natural traits of character. They were preparing to retire for the night, and as Rosine did not begin the reading of the note, Marion tock the pins from her luxuriant mass of chestnut hair, and commenced her myself to silk stockinge." toilet, saying very indifferently, 'You may do as you please about by constant unwavering efforts for reading me the note, or telling me the position he was determined to any thing of your new friends.

stairs

TO BE CONTINUED

THE SELFISHNESS OF JESSICA

Very blithely the golden caroling ounded in the spring twilight. "I wish those robins would keep still ! Jessica complained wearily. her ; When they are mixed in with all this they make me want to cry." By the floor for a minute. all this" she meant the scent of lilacs over some one's wall, the lingering sunset colors in the west and the langour that comes with the not dead !" She tried to laugh, to first really hot day in May. You're perishing for the country move her head, to speak. goose, I'm all right !" she gasped out you're hungry - that's the and The teacher of algebra, matter." who was tall and calm and self assured, looked down at the teacher supper of history, who was thin and little "Why did you go chasand girlish.

ing off downtown without your supper? I had mine an hour and then my walk, and now I'm ready for a good evening's work."

The gas company had turned off the gas," Jassica explained. "Shirley has been forgetting to pay the bills, and if we were to have any supper at all, or any light-

Why not send Shirley ?' She was trimming a hat." 'On the gas money ?" "O Miss Stiffen!" Jessica's smile thing. Miss Stiffen was in did not smooth away her careworn Jessica was familiar with expression. She had worn that since she was ten years old-possibly held forth at teachers' meetings, and At every age she had been then even the principal kept very longer. able to find some one who needed to be taken cars of. Through high no youth hardy enough to live me!" school and college family responsibilities of various kinds had haunted ing. her path-or rather, she had reached out and gathered them in. But now, Miss Stiffen reflected, now that she was holding a well-paid position, word it seemed quite unnecessary for her to be starting out on "in-laws." And Shirley Wrenn, the young war bride of Jessica's brother, was, in Miss Stiffen's opinion, a "case"—lazy, What have I done to you? I'm a interminable period of waiting she "It wouldn't hurt Shirley to stand on her own legs," she began with exasperation the summer. Funny, isn't it, to think She'll be at the Elwood until August, of Shirley's being chaperon, just anyway." shouldn't go to Miss Stiffen !" Shirle cried with sudden resentment and Miss Stiffen agreed without reservation that it was extremely funny, then began to cry again. Forgive me for going off and and they parted in the hallway. Miss leaving you, dear," Jessica whispered Stiffen went on up to the third floor, but Jessica turned in at a comfortin a tender embrace.

Stiffen!

"Forgive me for taking your good time-I'll never able kitchenette apartment on the first. She had really not been able again be so selfish You mustn't have a nervors to afferd the apartment, but she had breakdown !" sobbed Shirley, and 10 they parted. Jessica tried to deny to herself that "I shouldn't have believed," s il she was either extremely tired or Jessica to herself, "not if anyone had told me-that I could put on ten pounds in as many weeks! And tanned-my!" Stretched out luxuri-Oc ously on the sun-warmed grass, she patted one plump brown hand with the other and gazed at the gleaming blue lake and dark green forest "Just in time, Jess! I can't decide "Heavenly-heavenly! Ob, if it weren't so selfish of me to be having all this !"

That was the nagging thought becoming, isn't_it? Only I had an which kept pricking its way into Jessica's mind; a mental picture of idea that, for a chaperon, it was a bit hat's Shirley pining in the hot city could "But almost succeed in bringing back the "It is a bit coquettish, if that's old careworn expression to Jessica's face. But Shirley wrote cheerfully, and Jessica found it hard to work A moment later she made an effort herself into a very thriving state to speak unconcernedly. "Have you anxiety-it was one of the effects of selfishness, she supposed-selfish-raised her charming, ness, or a whole quart of milk every 'Don't speak of food ! I ate a day, rambles through wild, pine scented woods, cool splashes in the lemon pie from the delicatessenlake at sunrise, fishing trips along never again, my dear! I'll be munchwonderful little streams and quiet ing barley and hot water for a week to pay for it. Do what you please in rows in the evening light over gleaming lake. Had a tired little history teacher ever had a vacation the kitchen; I haven't been inside See to your clothes when the inspiration like this? Why, she felt young is upon you-that's my motto. O younger then she had believed she could ever feel again. She smiled Jess, I found the darlingest suit at Reynard's, and there was a sale at to herself as she lay behind the big

Lowe & Swift's, and I just blew gray rock. Voices reached her. Two or three For a dizzy second Jessica tried to of the girls had a visitor from the rearrange in her head various items city and were showing her choice in the household budget. Then her bits in the surrounding landscape but Jassica decided that she was thoughts veered sickeningly. Every-one knows what a kitchen looks like lazy to move, and the big rock hid when the breakfast dishes have not

her. "The peachiest hat I ever saw-it been washed. Perhaps it was thatcan't be your old one! Tell me where you had it done?" or the thought of a whole lemon pie when she wanted hot tea more than anything in the world! at any rate, "Burchell's. They have a trimmer as she turned something happened who's simply a whirlwind, I took in three old wrecks, and I wish you inside her; before she could reach could see what she made of them the door she was engulied by a great wave of nausea ; she seemed to see a I say she has genius, and she's a dear too-a little war bride, pretty as an huge black curtain moving toward she felt herself slipping and apple blossom. And as for style!] decided that she must lie down on tell you there's one lucky man over in France. Shirley Wrenn's name. Write it down, Madgie, and As it she were very far away indeed. Jessica heard Shirley sobbing and calling to her wildly: "O Jess, Jess, if you want a real creation you'll know where to go." The girls passed on, but Jessica you're not dead, dearest-say you're lay on the grass as if stunned. Icy shivers ran through her. This-this You -was what she had forced darling with a tremendous effort. "I'll be Shirley into! George's wife-a milliner's trimmer ! Could she ever up in a minute-don't cry-I'll get forgive herself ? And then, as she went floating I knew I had no business having such a good time!" she said aloud, and then, turning her face to the away into blackness again, she heard Shirley scream, "Miss Stiffen! Miss grass, she cried bitterly.

It is very uncomfortable to faint At seven o'clock the next evening that was Jessica's first awakening Jessica stood in the hallway of the thought. She found herself on the Elwoed. In spite of her efforts to couch, and she did not care about be composed she found that she was opening her eyes, because if she did trembling. She had rehearsed many times what she was going to say: she would have to say something, Do not suppose that I blame you and she did not feel like saying any. the in the least-it is only myself that I blame — and when we tell George I shall take the full responsibility. I room with Shirley, and she was holding forth in the tone of one who sees her duty and her opportunity. can never forgive myself for my Miss selfishness-for robbing you of your good time-for deserting you and Stiffen's holdings forth ; she often leaving you alone. Whatever was the matter, you should have told me.

DAY, FERGUSON & CO. tohn M. Ferguson ceeph P. Walsh LUNNEY & LANNAN BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTAEIRS Harry W. Lunney, B. A., B. C. L. Alphonsus Lannan, LL. B. CALGARY, ALBERTA

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR NOTARY PUBLIC CONVEYANCER Telephone 1081 to Loan Telepho HERALD BLDG. ROOM 24

ARCHITECTS WATT & BLACKWELL

Eixth Floor, Bank of Toront LONDON, ONT. nto Chambers

DR. BRUCE E. EAID

EDUCATIONAL

St. Jerome's College Founded 1864 KITCHENER, ONT.

Excellent Business College Departme ellent High School or Academic Dep ellent College and Philosophical Dep Address :

REV. W. A. BENINGER, C. R., President

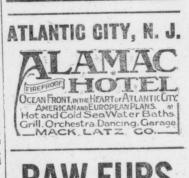

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

John Ferguson & Sons 180 KING ST.

Th Leading Undertakers & Embalmers Open Night and Day

389 Burwell St. Phone 3971

MAY 29, 1920

ARRISTERS. SOLICITORS MURPHY & GUNN BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES

Solicitors for The Home Bank of Canada itors for the Roman Ca Episcopal Corporation

Suite 53, Bank of Toronto Chambers LONDON, CANADA Phone 178 FOY, KNOX & MONAHAN

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES, ETC

T. Louis Monshes George Keogh A. E. Knox E. L. Middleton Cable Address : "Foy Telephones { Main 461 Main 462

Offices : Continental Life Building CORNER BAY AND RICHMOND STREETS TORONTO

TORONTO, CANADA

JOHN H. MCELDERRY

GUELPH, ONT.

Members Ontario Association ARCHITECTS

DENTISTS

Room 5, Dominion Bank Chambers Cor. Richmond and Dundas Sta. Phone Phone 8699

Telephone-House 373 Factory 543

she possessed a degree of promptitude you my daughter." and energy mingled with delicacy, for the most trying occasions. After dispatching a messenger for the prisst, she went at once to the office of Dr. Nelson, where she found him pale and dejected.

e and dejected. That poor child is going fast, she her father. "Then I shell surely go," she cried, "Then I shell surely go," she cried, cannot live a week," he said, as Mrs. Benton closed the door; "O, if I could help her to a decision!"

You have helped her, Doctor; you have done more for her than minister to her bodily ills; you have led her to ask for baptism, and I have dispatched a messenger for the priest."

Thank God, thank God !" exclaimed the young man, "this is what I have prayed for most earn-

"But she has specially requested reasoned to no purpose with the tionately about her waist; "but I reasoned to no purpose with the tionately about her waist; "but I reckon if papa were to see you to-the intrusion of worldly the relation of Marion; she was not to be shaken: the intrusion of worldly thoughts and she even questioned his love for her; distractions at such a time, and has that was so selfish as to wish to keep not even asked for my daughter's her immured in Athlacca, when she presence." prised, and a little disappointed,

.

4

I can understand her wishes,' "I can understand her wishes," continued Mrs. Benton, locking out of the window as she spoke, "and wronged his beloved, in wishing to be wronged his beloved, in wishing to wronged his beloved, in wishing to and her brother," said Marion, see-returning ; yes, and here is Father matter.

Sheridan following close in his wake.

judicious, my dear counsellor," he must say it's night ime since you've replied; then rising and going to an inner room, he brought out a small these diggins; put the Doctor into a silver crucifix. "Give this to Alice fever that none of his truck'll cure, for me, and tell her I am praying for I'll be bound, and made an old man for me, and tell her I am praying for her." Mrs. Benton sought no opportunity to give either the message or the gift till the selemn scene was over. Alice till the selemn scene was over. Alice ived but two days after the reception of the secrements, but the crucifix was never out of her hand; she sel-was nev lived but two days after the reception of the orucifix with an attempt to smile, while he with an attempt to smile, while he extended one hand to Rice, and in to talk, even to you, of other people's who have taken a cottage there for Miss Stiffen," was Jessica's last word.

under that mild and gentle exterior ing, "We shall leave the answer to 'But can I go?" she inquired, eagerly, and then blushing crimson, as she met the earnest look of her father.

Your mother and I think it best to leave the decision with you," said clapping her hands and running to the door to meet Mr. Leighton. Think of it, Horatio! a winter in - Isn't it enough to make me giddy 'And me giddler ?" he said, in his outspoken honest way, as she stood before him. "Why will you torture me ; you know you will not go !" But indeed I will," she replied ; 'look at this;" and she gave him them when we meet."

the letter of invitation.

Dr. Nelson looked sur- had such an opportunity for improvement as well as enjoyment. She played the injured one, till the lover

"This beats all my first wife's I must go over and prepare for the relations!" he exclaimed, as he I must go over and prepare for the ceremony; in the meantime you know very well what is the best thing you can do for us." "You are always right, always could I help it ? he is so kind to me, but not in that way. Why, Marion it is absurd !" she added eagerly. "By no means absurd," said the sister, laughing at her earnestness and evident confusion; "he is a splendid fellow : I don't mean handsome, enough he isn't ugly; but he's so genial, funny, and sensible; and then of course he's rich, all these years in his profession, but he's the of course he's rich, all these it seemed quite procession, but he's it seemed quite procession. years in his prefession, here, and high up in it too ; I wonder he has not married before ; if I were you-"

He

"O don't, sister !" exclaimed Rosine, fearfully, putting both hands selfish, extravagant. over her sister's mouth ; " don't say any more. I don't like to have such thoughts about him, they would mar the freedom of our intercourse, and I am afraid now, I shall think of What a funny child you are, said Marion, putting her arm affec-tionately about her waist; "but I flirting, such as he gave me.'

Coquetry ! flirting !" exclaimed for George !"

Rosine was glad of any change in the conversation, and though her feelings were smarting under the imputation of a flirt, she was still desirous to conciliate her sister, therefore she drew from her pocket the paper, questioning if she really turned in at an old fashioned apart-had a right to read Dora's note to ment house, she asked, "What is Marion. The sister observed the hesitation with which she moved, and said petulantly, "I wish I had school? For I suppose, no matter school?

to confide in me; new friends have to teach."

"O Miss Stiffen! The government allotment is so small, and she's never had to earn money in her life."

"Time she began. Or if she hasn't gumption enough, her own family might take her in."

She feels that they aren't very gether, you might have one of his severe lectures on coquetry and if she were nearer George with me. her now. Don't open your mouth, janitor hadn't said. O Miss Stiffen, I would do anything

"Coquetry ! firting !" exclusive Rosine, withdrawing a little from the snug embrace; "I think they are both wicked; and I am sure both wicked; and I am sure this is no such thing." Is considered to be the straight this is no such thing." "You'll be goed to yourself you older woman's mind of the straight young fellow in uniform over in France. "Humph!" It was a slightly this is no such thing." "You'll be goed to yourself you write if you want me to come home, won't you 2" Jessica pleaded. A hundred times she had declared that she-would-not-go-one-

"I suppose you softened "Humph." of the window as the spoke, "and wronged his beloved, in wishing to you will know by and by perhaps, why she wishes to be so secluded. I am persuaded it is from no fear of man, but only as I have said, fear of distractions. But I see my messenger returning res. But I see my messenger returning res. But I see my messenger mather." Is uppose you and her brother," said Marion, see would is a law or and her brother," said Marion, see would is a law or and her brother," said Marion, see would is a law or and the news, and her brother," said Marion, see would when you consider everything, it is to search out the truth of the news, and here is the sector of the messenger returning res. and here is the sector in the about this a law or and the news, and her brother," said Marion, see would when you consider everything, it is to search out the truth of the news, and here is a sector of the sector is the sect just a little extravagant." "It by that you mean that she's always let some one else pay the bills not for a minute hear of Jessica's not without even looking at them herself, going. Jessica thought she had made perhaps it isn't," Miss Stiffen admitted coolly; and then, as they the little frightened look had come into her eyes.

want me for anything, of course you will let me knew," Jessica had said ; staid at Inglewood; you are afraid how much you need a rest, you mean no youth hardy enough to live through the process without blench-Jessica always choked at this point-even in rehearsals. She had Jessica was able to feel sorry for Shirley, but still she did not want to for Miss Stiffen's benefit, but, as she say anything. Then through the sick confusion of her mind pierced the reflected, they would have to be 'parasite"-oh, that would deferred until Miss Stiffen's return never do! Trying to shout at them, Jessica made a noise like the moan selfish brute, and you're an angel! heard a dragging footstep. Her heart But just get well, and I'll never charge another thing! I'll stay home leaped and stood still. That could not be Shirley, unless hideous and -and you go to the lake instead of humiliating toil had weighed even me. O Jessica, plaase say you will !" "Of course she will go," Miss Stiffen put in firmly. That's decided. more heavily than she feared. Then a young woman dressed in a neat Miss blue checked gingham appeared at Stop crying and run and get hot milk the door with a toddler clinging to -that will be better for Jessica than her skirts. No, Mrs. Wrenn didn't any amount of tears. She's baen live here-she couldn't say where she might be, she'd just moved in killing herself with worry and examthe week before herself-no the

The door closed on the nest young Jessica, until that milk comes." woman with har toddler, and Jessica leaned limply against the wall. Her thoughts flew from one wild conjec ture to another, always coming back to panic to the question. Where was that she-would-not-go-one-Shirley? While she was trying to gather herself together, to think out a wise plan of procedure, there entered two brisk, well dressed figures in pleas ant, animated conversation.

'Miss Stiffen !" Jessica cried. thing? Ske had oried a good deal, Shirley but in spite of the tears she would

10.0

'How fat and rosy you are Jess !' exclaimed Shirley as the three mounted the stairs together. pretty good arrangements; she thought there would be plenty of most awfully becoming ! As for me, I suppose I've got rid of at least six money-if Shirley were careful-yet perfectly useless pounds.

'O poor Shirley !" cried Jessica.

"Shirley has been rooming with 'If you run out of money, or if you me," explained Miss Stiffen, leading the way into her airy, homelike and then Miss Stiffen had come in, and she had had no time to say more. our me and we have been getting our meals out. Did you have thing to eat on the train my dear? But Jessica was far beyond consideration of mundane matters. Shirley - Shirley, dearest !" she

NAM LOUG fashioned also some stern remarks Best Market Price Paid for Rack, Weasel and For. ROSS' LIMITED LONDON. ONT. in September. After debating inwardly whether to walk right in or to rap on the door 87 YONGE ST., TORONTO Phone Main 4030

"It's

Hennessey "Something More Than A Drug Store"

CUT FLOWERS DRUGS PERFUMES CANDIES Order by Phone - we Deliver Watch Our Ads. in Local Dailies Thursday

5051-02

Book Bargains

15c. Postpaid

Halt ! Who Goes There ? Wilfred Meynell. Every reader of "Aunt Sarah and the War" will want to read this book. Paper Cover.

60c. Each Postpaid)

essy Conway. By Mrs. James Sadlier. awthorndean. By Mrs. Clara M. Thompson. raw-Cutter's Daughter, The, by Lady Fullerton erchant of Antwerp, The. By Hendrid Convergence eremint of antwerp, rule. By iterative and Annabel and the Shepherd Boy, By Elizabeth M. Stewart. Mesaliance. By Katharine Tynan. Lightness of toy plot are all here, as always, in 27 are proved by Katharine Tynan. Genorials of Robert Hugh Benson. By Blanche Warre Cornish, Shane Leslie, and other of his Friends. A beautiful tribute to Father Benson by his friends. The book contains a number of anecdotes and notes.

by his friends. The book contains a number of macdotes and notes. Deer Jane." By Isabel Cecilia Williams. A simple tale very pleasantly toid. It is refreshing in its simple pathos and expression and true feeling. All who enjoy a clean, wholesome and stirring tale ought to read "Deer Jane." He Honor of the House. By Mrs. Hugh Fraser and J. I. Stahlmann. In the ancient and grim Palazzo Bordelacqua with its wonderful Roman gardens, is laid the scene of a story of trachery and loyaity, duplicity and upright fortitude, thoroughly Italian in the heights and depths of human nature that it discloses.

ORDER NOW

Our Stock is Limited

The Catholic Record LONDON, CANADA