After the first performance Beyer, who acted the part of an ambassador, was summoned by Governor General Gerard, who addressed him in Russian. ANOTHER MAN KILLED THE ROYAL BANK

The Latest Victim Was Melvin Spencer, a Man on the Hoist—The Elevator Shot of Wrong Signal, and He Was Thrown Shaft—Died at Hospital in Half an Hour.

(Thursday's Sun.)
The second fatality attending the construction of the Royal Bank of Canada building at the corner of Kings and Canterbury streets, occurred last evening. The victim this time was Melvin Spencer, signaller on the hoist, at eight o'clock and died in the hospital half an hour later.

Spencer at the time of the accident was on the hoist at the third floor of the building. This hoist is used for raising building material to the upper stories. Spencer had a loaded wheelbarrow on the platform of the hoist, the material being intended to be used on the third floor. It is supposed that the hoist stopped just short of an uncompleted condition and Spencer, thinking to have the platform raised a little, signalled to the engineer running the hoisting engine. The proper signal for a hoist lift is a long ring on the signal bell, followed by a short one; that for a lift of one story is two short rings. Spencer confused the two signals, ringing for a long lift. The shock of the unexpected lift is thought to have thrown the man off the platform into the shaft, down which he fell a distance of forty feet.

The injured man was picked up in an unconscious condition and Dr. D. E. Berryman was summoned. He examined the man and found both jaws broken, and the teeth were imbedded in his artery. The doctor's examination of the man's condition was such that he was taken to the hospital. The man's condition was such that he was taken to the hospital. The man's condition was such that he was taken to the hospital.
