

BODY PICKED UP AT LONG WHARF

Supposed to be That of John Dwyer

Had Papers Bearing This Name—Probably Fireman from S.S. Shenandoah

A body, supposed to be that of John Dwyer of England, formerly fireman on the Furness line steamer Shenandoah, was found at the I. C. R. wharf between three and four o'clock Saturday afternoon. When discovered the body was lying face downwards on the mud underneath the railroad tracks leading to the wharf. A line was put about the corpse and it was hoisted to the trestle. On the orders of Coroner Berryman the body was removed to the dead house. Papers found in the pockets indicated that it was the body of John Dwyer.

The gruesome discovery was made by some boys who, while walking over the bridge on the roadway leading to the I. C. R. pier, looked and saw the corpse lying beneath a near-by wharf. The Allan line office on the wharf was notified and search was made for a policeman. Patrolman Charles Marshall was found and took charge of the body until Dr. Berryman was notified. When the corpse was raised from the mud it was found to be in a rigid condition. On the orders of Coroner Berryman the body was removed to the dead house being used for the purpose.

A search of the clothing brought to light a royal naval reserve certificate, a couple of books, one of them small, two pipes, two cigars, a certificate of discharge and a colored handkerchief. A sweat cloth also found in the clothing bore on the supposition that the body was that of a fireman.

The letters were written in lead pencil and were useless as means of identification, as the greater portion of each was undecipherable. In the reserve certificate, however, and also in the seaman's discharge the name John Dwyer was written distinctly.

A curious feature in connection with one of the books was that its leaves were not water-soaked all the way through. This would seem to point to the fact that the body had not been in the harbor for a great while. Besides the articles mentioned above an empty cigarette package was also found on the body.

It is known that a fireman on the Furness line Shenandoah was named John Dwyer. It is also known that Dwyer was seen on New Year's eve in a very intoxicated condition. On that occasion he was in company with two other men, about whom nothing is known except that they were taller than their companion. Dwyer has not been seen since New Year's eve.

Coroner Berryman stated last evening that he did not think an inquest on Dwyer would be held. Negotiations for the burial of the body are being carried on with the department of marine and fisheries.

George Horton Morris has just reached England to prosecute claim for the vast Page estates, which is said to have an area of sixty square miles, lying north and west of Len Marle in the City of London, and including about a third of the county of Middlesex, whose suburbs of London and some parts of rural Hertfordshire. Like H. H. Druce, who claims the Portland estate, he comes from Australia, but he was born in Stoney, sixty-three years ago. He has been sailor, gold miner, hotel manager, manager of a woolen mill, and Sydney manager of Macmillan's, the famous Yarmouth fisherman.

DUSKY WARRIORS WHOSE PATRIOTISM HAS BEEN AROUSED BY THE SLOGAN OF "AFRICA FOR THE AFRICANS"

The first Zulu War they had learned the British force before they were subdued. There was a small outbreak last year, and they have again been turbulent. Outrages and murders have been increasing, and the government has decided to bring Dinuzulu as a prisoner to Pietermaritzburg. It is believed that the Zulus as a nation, do not desire war with the colonial forces, and that when the king is out of the way order will be restored.

Considerable trouble has been brewing in Zululand, which is now an administrative portion of Natal. There has been a great deal of unrest among the warlike Zulus, who have only recently taken to the more peaceful pursuits of agriculture and cattle rearing. This nation of warriors is always liable to be aroused by a cry of "Africa for the Africans," which it is reported, has always been preached to them by emissaries from a society of agitators among the negroes of North America. Recently one of the loyal chiefs, Sitshikulu, was found murdered in his kraal. He had been loyal to the government since 1884, when Dinuzulu succeeded his father, Cetshwayo. This and other events have shown that the pacification of the country which was attempted last year has still to be brought to a successful conclusion, and on November 29 the Governor of Natal issued a proclamation at Pietermaritzburg calling attention to the disturbances in Zululand and the necessity of their cessation. The arrest of Dinuzulu was effected without the firing of a shot. The chief, accompanied by fifty followers, surrendered unconditionally at 11 o'clock, and is now under guard in Pietermaritzburg. Dinuzulu shows every sign that the severe strain has added to his physical infirmity. The Zulus are the most magnificent and warlike of the South African natives. Before the first Zulu War they had learned British terrible punishment upon the Zulus before they were subdued. There was a small outbreak last year, and they have again been turbulent. Outrages and murders have been increasing, and the government has decided to bring Dinuzulu as a prisoner to Pietermaritzburg. It is believed that the Zulus as a nation, do not desire war with the colonial forces, and that when the king is out of the way order will be restored.
