PRESIDENT WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—More minute details of the shooting of President McKinley by an anarchist are as follows: The president was at the exposition, which was the biggest day since its opening, and immense crowds of people thronged the entire exposition building, especially the Temple of Music where the president was receiving. The assassin approached and extended his hand. The president smiled pleasantly and grasped it. The other hand of the anarchist was in a bandage through which he shot. The report of the shooting as elicited from bystanders by the Associated Press is as follows:

"When the shots were fired the president made one step backward and quivered slightly. His private secretary, Corydon, President Milburn, of the exposition, and Detective Foster sprang immediately to his aid while Detectives Ireland and Parker threw themselves upon the assailant, crushed him to the floor and attempted to disarm him. The prisoner struggled desperately and getting one arm free attempted to fire a third shot at the president but the revolver was struck from his hand, knocking it several feet away.

"President McKinley himself plucked from his side the bullet which was first fired and which struck the breast bone and glanced, lodging in the skin of his side and as he did so remarked to Detective Foster, 'I believe there is another bullet in there.' Shortly afterwards he said, 'Do not exaggerate this to Mrs. McKinley.'

"The president displayed great fortitude and until the time came to carry him from the building his coolness and courage were truly remarkable."

The shooting occurred at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and all during the evening and until long past midnight dense crowds thronged the streets and anxious inquiries were made for information regarding the president's condition. Thousands of people loitered about the newspaper bulletin boards.

Missourians Walk Out.
Northport, Sept. 3.—Forty-five of the sixty-two Missourians brought here yesterday to take the places of strikers at the Lo Roi smelter, walked out today, asserting that conditions had been misrepresented to them. A purse of $200 was raised among citizens to send them to Marcus and other points, all night in the hope of obtaining additional information. Not since the shooting of President Garfield by Guiteau on July 2, 1881, has such deep feeling been expressed over an outrage.

It is stated that a partial confession was obtained from the assassin in the jail to which place he was hurried shortly after the shooting. He gave his name as Leon Czolgosse, but denied that he is a member of any anarchistic society. He said he attempted to kill the president for the reason that he believes the present form of government is unjust. He denies that he was the instrument in any plot or that he had any accomplices in the crime. He is from Detroit, Mich., and a disciple of Emma Goldman, the enthusiastic woman-anarchist of New York.

Buffalo, Sept. 7.—5 m.—The president has passed the first 24 hours after being wounded very comfortably and is yet resting easily. The attending physicians are hopeful that he will withstand the shock and that his powerful constitution will enable him to pull through. The second ball has not yet been located but probably will be tomorrow by the aid of the X-ray.

Telegrams of condolence to the president are pouring in from not only all points in the United States, but from the entire civilized world.

(William McKinley was born at Niles, Ohio, January 29, 1844; enlisted in the United States army in May, 1861, as a private soldier in the 23d Ohio volunteer infantry, and was mustered out as captain of the same regiment and brevet major in September, 1865; was prosecuting attorney of Stark county, Ohio, 1869-71; was elected to the 45th congress (1877), and sat continuously until 1891, becoming one of the leaders of the Republican party and its chief advocate of protection. In the 51st congress he was chairman of the committee on ways and means, and in 1890 introduced the tariff measure, adopted and since known as the McKinley bill. He was defeated for reelection in 1890, but was elected governor of Ohio in 1891. He was re-elected in 1893 by a plurality of 80,995 over Lawrence Neal, a revenue reform Democrat, and at once became prominent as a presidential possibility for 1896. McKinley clubs were organized in many parts of the country and in 1895 a systematic movement to secure his nomination was carried on by his supporters. Since his election to the presidency his life has been as an open book to all reading people, his reelection last November by the largest majority of the popular vote ever received by any candidate for the position attests to his popularity with the American people, and from all over the most aggressive nation on earth will ascend prayers to God that the name William McKinley may not be added to the list of martyred presidents.)

CARIBOU DEAD GAME

He Defeats Donovan in Less Than Two Rounds.

Caribou Sinclair and Young Donovan met last night in a fist encounter at the Orpheum which lasted a little over one round, Caribou pitting his man out in true gladiatorial style. The go while short was the best exhibition pulled off in Dawson for some time, both men being willing. Caribou from the start showed superior strength and no little skill, but almost lost the battle in the first round by a fluke, Donovan butting him in a clinch with such force that Caribou became rattled and fought wild. He soon regained his head, however, and landed on his man with a left hook under the jaw which lifted Donovan from the floor and hurled him prone on his back. After this blow Donovan visibly weakened and Caribou rushed him with both right and left. When time was called in the second the go was all Caribou's and he finished with a left and right hook both of which landed bringing his man to the floor, where he remained until counted out. Eddie O'Brien acted as referee and Walter Lyons timekeeper. Ed Kelly from Nome challenged the winner of the contest and Caribou accepted the same. Kelly is a game fighter, according to Eddie O'Brien, he having seen him perform at Nome where he met Dick Case and stayed with him for 12 rounds in a furious battle. The go between him and Caribou will probably be pulled off at the New Savoy.

men were being taken there. Guiton waived examination and was released on $3000 bonds.

Nothing has yet been done with regard to the shooting affair yesterday when Deputy Sheriff Guiton and Deputy Sheriff Anderson, in which several harmless shots were exchanged. There is still considerable ill-feeling, but nothing like the excitement that existed last night.

PRaises HAWKINS

Victoria Colonist Says He Should Have Been Retained.

Victoria, Sept. 7, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—The Colonist prints a confirmation of the report of Hawkins' resignation from the position of general superintendent of the White Pass railroad and in a long comment gives the history of his connection with the road, praising his ability and showing why he should have been if possible retained by the company. The Colonist says it will not be long before Hawkins will probably be connected with some other western transportation enterprise.

CUT RATES AVOIDED

Alaska Steamship Association Comes To Terms.

Seattle, Sept. 7, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—The Alaska Steamship Association has agreed on rates and cuts in future will be avoided. The present rate will continue until October. No steamers are to wait over in Skagway longer than 24 hours and no passengers are to be transferred from B. C. points to Seattle and vice versa. A schedule is being prepared to prevent the bunching of fast steamers.

COLUMBIAN CHOSEN

New York, Sept. 6, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—The Columbian has been chosen as the American cup defender.

PACIFIC COAST CO.

Has in Contemplation Scheme for Peopling Alaska.

The Pacific Coast company has in contemplation a scheme which, if carried out and the proper changes are made in the land laws of the United States, will result in peopling of Alaska by Norwegians, Finns and Swedes and the entire country will be made self-sustaining. This scheme provides for the opening up of the millions of acres of low land along the southeastern coast, and in the interior of Alaska, and permitting homeseekers to occupy them and develop the agricultural resources. Given the proper legislation this company, in common with several other large transportation companies, will send photographers into Alaska, and later competent lecturers equipped with stereoscopic views made from these photographs will be sent to European countries and a vast tide of immigration will be turned Alaska-wards and the country will be transformed.

James G. Woodworth, traffic manager of the Pacific Coast company, has had the matter in hand for some time. Upon the general conditions prevailing and the wonderful future possibilities of Alaska, Mr. Woodworth says:

"The United States owes its remarkable development, prosperity and extension of its territory to the pertinacity of the homeseeker and for his benefit many laws have been passed by the authorities at Washington, under the protection of which he is enabled to occupy and eventually become possessed of certain parcels of government land."

"The United States has been ably assisted in this matter by the various transportation companies, and now it has developed that Alaska, a country but a few years ago considered as worthless except from the standpoint of the fur trader, and during the past few years only looked upon as a country of vast mineral resources, is worthy of more consideration, and that with the advent of the homeseeker, it is possible to open up a country the agricultural resources of which will rival those of the Northern European countries."

Attempted Murder.

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Myra Priest, a waitress in a restaurant in this city, is under arrest for attempted murder. She has a daughter about 12 years of age, who had been adopted by a woman named Vener, who lives near Whitesburg. Mrs. Vener is well off financially and had promised to leave to the little girl all her property. To hasten this end it is alleged the mother of the girl sent a box of candy with instructions to the little girl with instructions not to eat any of it herself, but to give it to Mrs. Vener, which was done. The woman ate of the candy and was immediately taken sick. Her life was saved by a physician.

THE YANKEE WOOD CHOPPER

A rare bit of experience which we prize more than anything else we can think of just now is how we once won a sovereign from the world renowned Premier Wm. R. Gladstone. It is now close on thirty years ago, that I made the trip to the mother country. And one of the incidents I best remember is making a trip to North Wales in company with a Lancashire cousin. Taking the mail packet at Liverpool we made a quick run to Llandudno, a fine resort on the north coast of Wales. The old city of Conway and the renowned Conway castle, about four miles in the rear of Llandudno are quaint old places, and have a wonderful and fascinating history.

In company with our Lancashire cousin and a jovial Frenchman from Derby, we started early one bright summer morning to explore the coast road from Conway to Bangor, Maenal bridge and other points. The scenery was most enchanting, and the atmosphere exhilarating, and the distance we travelled aloft would to an American have been quite staggering. In our journey we visited Hawarden Hall, the famous park and surroundings of the Gladstone country seat.

Gladstone at that time had achieved fame as a wood chopper. Hearing the ringing stroke of an ax in the woods, we concluded to see who the woodchopper was, and what sort of a job he was doing. He was a man apparently 55 years of age; straight and active looking, without any hat on; in his shirt sleeves, giving lusty blows to a large birch tree. We didn't know who he was, but having lived in America long enough to think that we were pretty smart, we exclaimed in a loud voice:

"Hello, Johnny Bull, you're making a rather sorry job of cutting down that tree."

The woodchopper rested on his ax, and turning slowly towards us—a fine handsome face full of good nature and smiling, he exclaimed:

"Look here, my little man, for I had been the spokesman, 'maybe you are conceited enough to think you can do a better job. Would you like to try it?'"

I asked how long it would take him to fall the tree. The great premier looked the tree over carefully and then said, that he thought it would take him at least an hour. Quick as a flash I replied:

"I'll bet you a dollar that I can chop down that tree in twenty minutes."

The premier looked at me good naturedly and said:

"You're a little man physically, but large in conceit. I'm not much of a betting man," continued the immortal Gladstone in a clear ringing voice, "but I'll tell you what I'll do, my little man. I'll give you a sovereign if you can chop down that tree in twenty minutes, and if you don't do it in that time you are to cut it down for nothing."

"Agreed," said I, and I flung my coat at my Lancashire cousin, and my hat at the Frenchman, and went at it in true Yankee style.

In just 17 and 37 seconds I had felled the tree, and Gladstone looked on with much interest and surprise in his honest countenance. No sooner was the job done, than out came the sovereign.

"Surely," said he, "you're a regular Yankee, and you've got the right kind of grit."

I told him that I was English born, but had lived in America and served in the great civil war, and had become a real American.

"But," said I, as I pocketed the sovereign, "who are you, and what's your name. You know the Yankee always likes to ask questions."

"Well," said the great premier—a wide grin o'er his eyes—his fine features, "my name is Gladstone and I live at the hall yonder. Come with me to the hall and we'll have a bit of lunch." The great chancellor took me by the arm, and the Lancashire cousin and the Frenchman followed on behind. We were introduced by the great man to the lady of Hawarden hall, Mrs. Gladstone.

And such a lunch as we had! Good sweet milk, home-made bread and cold roast mutton; good enough for a king. After being shown the family library and other matters of interest, we left our card at Hawarden, with a standing invitation to call and see the great statesman either at Hawarden or London any time.

Ten or twelve years later I stopped at the Downing street residence of the premier of England, and sent up my card—simply, Richard Dobson, Niles, Mich., U. S. A.

I was soon ushered into the private room of the renowned Gladstone. "Ah," said he, "my little woodchopper from Michigan."

I showed the premier the sovereign that I had won from him for which I wouldn't take a Kentucky farm, and he told me that it was well earned, and that he had got the worth of his money, for he had had that same tree made into furniture, and the most of it now, was at Hawarden hall.

SYMPATHY EXPRESSED

Meeting of Dawson Residents Today Irrespective of Nationally

TO GIVE EXPRESSION OF FEELING

Regarding Attempted Assassination of President McKinley.

WIRE TO SECY OF STATE

Was Sent Bearing Signatures of U. S. Consul McCook and Legal Advisor Congdon.

From Thursday's Daily.

The meeting called by U. S. Consul McCook to frame a resolution of sympathy upon the attempted assassination, news of which was received in Dawson last evening, met in the Board of Trade rooms at 12 o'clock today. Representatives of all the departments of the government and many citizens both of the United States and Canada, were present.

Justice Dugas, at the request of U. S. Consul McCook, presided and in a brief address on calling the meeting to order said:

"News of one of those sad events which fill the world with horror and of painful sentiments reached us last night. The president of the United States was on the 6th inst. the victim of a cowardly attack at the hands of an assassin. Whether the mischievous deed has proven or will prove to be fatal we do not know; let us hope and pray God that it has not or will not. Of him I will say nothing except that he is the honored chief of a great nation chosen to preside over its destiny and loved and honored by his supporters and intimate friends as well as respected by his adversaries."

"Words are inadequate to express sufficient reprobation for such heinous crimes and the whole human family joins heart to heart in the feelings of honor which they inspire; and those should be echoed from all parts of the world as expressing such reprobation which exist against whosoever entertains and promulgates such ideas as those which apparently have prompted the assassin in his action. It is with this in view, gentlemen, that we are together, and further to express our profoundest sympathy and regret to the honored victim and his family as well as to the great country to which he belongs."

After the address of Justice Dugas a committee was appointed consisting of Justice C. A. Dugas, J. C. McCook and F. T. Congdon to draft the resolutions and after deliberations read the following:

"The citizens of Dawson having just learned of the attempt upon the life of the president of the United States, in meeting assembled desire to convey their profound sympathy with the president and family and the people of the United States, and to deplore the despicable act of the assassin and express their heartfelt prayer that it will fall of its object, and that the president may soon recover."

The resolution was unanimously adopted and was wired to the secretary of state at Washington this afternoon.

Arrangements Made for Horse Race for Blood.

"Jimmie Puzler," Chief Stewart's horse which was recently purchased by Wm. Welsh has been matched against Chas. R. McClood's "Harry N" for a half mile race for a purse of $200 a side. The race will take place on the new Hunter drive way just above the Ogilvie bridge on Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

Both of the horses are pedigreed animals and have figured conspicuously on the track not only in Dawson but on the outside.

"Jimmie Puzler" carried off the prize in every race he entered on the 24th of May. "Harry N" did not arrive in Dawson until sometime in June but he was entered in the race on the Fourth of July and the honors between the two noble animals on that day were about evenly divided.

The race, scheduled for Saturday fits for he had had that same tree made into furniture, and the most of it now, was at Hawarden hall.
