The Death of J. deM. Wallace.

Particulars have come to hand of the tragic death of James deMill Wallace, near Tacoma, Washington territory, on April 21st.

The deceased was well known in this section of the country and was the son of the Rev. Isaiah Wallace.

He was walking on the road as a trifle hazy in sight, when, becoming confused, he stepped onto the track in front of the approaching engine. The engine threw him to one side, a blow upon the head causing instant death.

In a paper passed he was carrying the personal effects, clothing and a few books of his parents and wife. It was learned that he was injured by an accident that befell a Northern Pacific train in March, and was treated by a physician. After paying for medical attendance, he had but little money left, which compelled him to walk instead of riding to the city.

According to the contents of a letter from his home, he was to meet a brother in Vancouver, B. C., who left Halifax early in April.

Two hundred women waited upon Sir Oliver Mowat on Friday last. They represented the Woman's Emancipation Association and subsidiary organizations in sympathy with the movement.

The petitions of the fair pleaders demanded that "maturity of the intelligence" be the qualifications for woman suffrage. It sets forth the usual arguments for the rights of women, and concludes with the following request: "(1) Give married women the right to vote on the same conditions on which widows and spinners are at present allowed to vote for municipal elections. (2) Extend the parliamentary franchise to women on the same conditions as to men."

The Canadian Pacific railway company have arranged for new steamship services connecting the royal mails between Vancouver, B. C., and Sydney, N. S. W., calling at Victoria, B. C., Honolulu (Sandwich Island) and Brisbane (Queensland). The line consists of two new steamers of about 5,000 tons burden, with a speed of 15 knots, and they are expected to make the trip in 21 days in each direction. The Mowat will leave Vancouver, June 14th, to be followed by the Merrimack on July 14th, and monthly thereafter.

The Way of the World.

Newspaper editing is a very funny amusement. If you give a man a puff he never sees it; but let one line against him appear, and he sees it before the paper is off the press; and while he would not have time to stop on the street to say "thank you," he has time to run all over town to denounce the editor who seeks to print the news.

Physicians in cholera districts state that where there is no indigestion there will be no cholera. K. D. G. will cure your indigestion and make you cholera proof.

On Attending the Post Office.

HARLAN COX.

Go to the post office often. In these fast days it looks careless and behind the times not to be interested in what the mails are bringing.

It is a good sight to see people rushing out of the office; men with their dailies and their business letters, women with their Delimitators and their journals, girls with their love letters, and everybody with a roll of Hood's sarsaparilla advertisement. Yes, go often, but do not overdo it. If there are eight mails daily at your office, do not call oftener than thirteen times in a day, and if you have several brothers and sisters who go regularly for the same mail, eleven times will do. Always be polite to the postmaster. First ask him if there is anything for you, and if he says, no, ask him if there are any letters, then if there are any papers, then if there are any post cards. Then ask him if your Family Herald is not there and if there is not a bundle of American papers for your mother and if there is a registered letter for your father. If you get a weekly newspaper and it comes on Thursday, don't commence asking for it before Tuesday afternoon, but if you only take a monthly paper, every other Saturday is often enough to call for it. If you expect a letter and it does not come, let the postmaster know. Tell him you cannot account for it not being there, that it is very queer, and do not leave until you make it plain to him that he is to blame. If some night at a quarter to four you want to find out if the five o'clock mail is in, tap at the delivery window, and if the postmaster does not come and you see that he is very busy, just tap a considerable louder, and keep on tapping until he answers and you get your information which will be in the negative. Then after he has gone to his work call him to the window again and ask him how long before it will be in. If your boy gets your mail and goes off to play and loses a letter and drops the papers in the mud, do not blame the postmaster but talk to your boy. What you do not want your children to get your mail, forbid them to call for it. If your paper is delayed some day, do not think the postmaster kept it to read or gave it to someone else or mis-laid it. A postmaster would a great deal rather give you your papers than keep them in the office. Postmasters are generally honorable men and will do what is right and will not read a postal card and will not read a postal card and will not read a postal card.

Use you politely so use them. Politeness looks as pretty in a post office as in a parlor, and the true man or woman will act in both alike.

A Wonderful Paper.

The World's Fair number of the Youth's Companion just received to us every day a magnificent issue, a worthy contribution to the Columbian year and the greatest Fair the world has ever seen. It gives a full description of the different departments of the Fair, also important directions showing how to see the Fair and what to see each day.

Its illustrations are superb, no less than thirteen full pages devoted to photographic views of those unequalled buildings which make up the "White City." It has a strikingly beautiful cover lithographed in ten colors, with a frontispiece showing the Administration Building, the Lagoon, its gondolas and one of its numerous bridges, and the Electrical Fountain. The whole issue has Thirty-Six Pages and more than Sixty Illustrations, and is highly artistic. It is certainly without a rival among the World's Fair issues.

All the old subscribers to The Companion will receive it free, and any new subscribers received, with $1.75 for a year's subscription, will also obtain a copy while the edition lasts. Seven hundred thousand copies have been printed, but are not likely to be sufficient for the demand. Single numbers may be obtained by sending ten cents to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., or of any newsdealer.

A New York daily paper, taking up the idea conveyed in Flammarion's exciting novel, "Oméga: The Last Days of the World," has interviewed a number of the leading men in all professions as to what they would do if science were to predict to-morrow that the end of the world would arrive within the next thirty days. The answers are various and curious, and heighten the interest which is felt in the second part of Flammarion's great novel, which appears in the May Compendium. It is a question which everyone will find interesting to ask of himself: What would you do if within six weeks the end of the world were certain? Probably no novel which has ever appeared in an American magazine has been more elaborately illustrated by more distinguished artists. Laurens, Sannier, Vogel, Meaille, Rochegrosse Geradin and Chovin all contribute to the explanation of the text.

A clever story of another kind is that of the new English novelist, Gilbert Parkes, in the same number. "American Society in Paris" is an article of another kind, but one which will interest all who have occasion to make even a short residence in the French capital. The Compendium scores a success in producing in its May number, almost simultaneously with the daily papers, an elaborate description of Professor Gray's marvelous invention, the Telautograph, which reproduces the handwriting, or the work of the artist, simultaneously, thousands of miles distant from the place where the writer or artist is sitting. Mr Howells' purpose in "The Traveller from Altrux" is, month by month, becoming more evident, and is now receiving wide attention at the hands of the critics all over the world.

Photographs Wanted.

To the Editor of the Halifax Herald: Sir,—Being desirous of advancing in every way the interests of the province with prospective tourists the coming season, I desire to solicit through your columns everything in the shape of good photographs of scenery which might have an influence in directing their attention Nova Scotia-ward. Will then the amateur and professional photographers send me some copies of their best productions that I may place them upon exhibition in our offices in the leading American cities. I make this request to those interested throughout the province and hope your contemporaries will be kind enough to copy.

M. J. KEATING, Advertising and Press Agent Canada Atlantic and Plant S. S. Co. 20 Atlantic avenue, Boston.

To the Farmers of Kings Co.:

GENTLEMEN,—It has been decided to hold the first of the King's Co. Fairs for this year at Waterville on the last Wednesday of May. I confidently anticipate a large gathering of farmers and farm stock and in order that my anticipations may be realized, I ask your help and cooperation in this matter. Make an effort to be present, and make a point of bringing the stock you want to sell with you. There is ample accommodation in the Grove for a large quantity of cattle, and the inhabitants will make you heartily welcome. Much might be said of the benefits to be derived from Cattle Fairs and the disadvantages connected with the present system of buying and selling cattle. Take for example the time you lose in making a house to house search for the animals you want, and also the difficulty in arriving at the true value or market value of the same. Neither buyer or seller can get beyond the one idea that each must have the best of the bargain and the consequences are that half a day slips past in the bootless game of haggling. In a Cattle Fair on the other hand you can pick out in a few minutes the stock you want to purchase and by comparing price with price, the real value of the cattle is correctly ascertained. In the fair also, friend meets friend, and interchange of views on farm subjects generally will probably occupy the time of meeting. Farmers need rousing up and as iron sharpeneth iron, will an interchange of ideas clear your vision and help you more into harmony with the age in which you live. If it should be thought desirable to advertise in the local papers any stock you may want to buy or sell at the Fair, I have asked the proprietors of these papers to offer a specially low rate for such advertisements. Let us pull all together, union is strength—and the issue will surely be to the lasting benefit of the whole community. The meeting will be on Wednesday, May 31st, at 10 o'clock, at the Waterville Hotel. Yours respectfully, THOMAS LAWSON.
