

WORKING MEN'S COLLEGES.

It cannot be denied that one of the most striking characteristics of the age in which we live is the growing desire to acquire knowledge by the laboring classes to raise themselves in the social sphere, by attaining to a higher knowledge of the facts and circumstances which surround them.

teaching of the past. The most economical course is surely to procure that each lesson should be a preparation for the next, and that the pupil should feel sure of his ground. For this end it is necessary to make the lessons not too long, and that at least half of each lesson should consist of questions repeating that of the former time. For this end it was useful, thirdly, to give our pupils a considerable choice of subjects, that each might take that which suited his taste or his circumstances, or his objects in life best; that where he is most desirous of wanting help and cheerfulness, he may be put into a method of studying them.

Josephine in 1814 and their grandsons now rule as two wide and powerful allies in one of the most momentous and sanguinary struggles in which Europe was ever involved.
