THE ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

BEACONSFIELDS' DEFEAT.

The Elections of England have come off and contrary to the best wishes of those who prize British prestige and power, the Beaconsfield ministry has been overthrown. The Gladstone party, which people call the Liberals it appears have been reinstated, but with a very small majority: so small indeed that the day is not far when Mr. Gladstone will find that he has a white elephant on his hands, and will be compelled to dissolve. It must be borne in mind that an English Government can not be sustained with one or two, or scarce with 20 of a majority; and Lord Beaconsfield with all his astuteness found it difficult enough to lead his Government along with a majority of 36.

But supposing the Gladstone ministry does get a footing, it will be interesting to watch the progress of events. 'Tis true, no matter how great or how small the occasion, how tremendous or how trivial the questions involved, Right Hon. Mr. Gladstone will not be lacking in speeches. But spangled generalities while very good in their way, cannot, even by Mr. Gladstone be made to do the duty of cannon and steel. While England is far renowned and justly renowned for the brilliancy of her orators and her statesmen, her national greatness rests upon no such foundation. She has won her empire at the mouth of the cannon and at the point of the bayonet. Let us take some examples:

Were some theorist, like Gladstone, at the helm, preaching "peace at any price" to the people at home, while British subjects were suffering tortures by Surajah Dowlah abroad, the Queen of England to-day would not have been Empress of India, and England would be the "third rate star," that the Powers began to call her, scarce ten years ago.

Gibraltar was not wrested from the hands of the Spaniards by the God-fearing (?) and peace-loving admirals that the "peace at any price" champion would have, but by a man after the temper of the hero of "Galtie's bloody wave." Had a Gladstone ruled in stead of a Pitt the Nile and Trafalgar would never have been won, and no matter whether the world would have been blest or scourged by the triumph of the "hated Corsican," England might have found herself at the feet of that modern Alexander.

But we need not appeal at all to history for examples to our purpose. We need but look three years back when the sudden news flashed over the world that Russia was putting on her habiliments of war, and her soldiers were swarming down towards the Golden Horn. Then the time had arrived when the man who sued for "peace at any price" had no business in England: it was then the statesman and the hero was needed. And there rose up a man, the same man whom the fickle populace has just dethroned, and he vindicated England's safety and England's honor. Without scarce an hour's delay the invincible ships of England had their prows turned for the Mediterranean. Those who read the papers know the results—Russia had bear like to return growing to her den, and England courageously and with dignity asserted herself as the barrier between the barbarians of the north and the civilized world. Great occasions it is said beget great men, but we ought not to trifle too much with the law of Circumstance. If we can venture to prophesy ere many months, should a Gladstone rule be ushered in, dark clouds will begin to gather in the East, and the rumbling of that storm which can only be met by great heads and strong arms will be heard. It will be interesting then to see what means Mr. Gladstone's theory, "Peace at any Price."

A HOME THRUST.

Let not our readers think we prefer war to peace; our belief being that a nation's greatness depends upon the heads in her council, as well as the arms in her field. But our object here is not yet attained. Wanting sheets like the St. John Sun for some time past have been educating the public mind to look upon Conservatism in England as they look upon it in Canada; but long ago we protested that the policy of Beaconsfield was as unlike the policy of Sir John, as the latter's policy is unlike that of Mr. Mackenzie. Now the issue is come and the cause of Conservatism in England is under foot: while the thousands who have read the ignorant and vulgar articles of low bred men like John Livingston, are scandalized at Conservatism in Canada, Sir Leonard Tilly will some day find out the mistake he has made in trusting his cause to such a person as Mr. Livingston. It were better far, Sir Leonard had gone quietly to work and purchased Mr. Elder, Telegraph and all, for with all that gentleman's insincerities, he has an education and a natural cunning that no one can take from him or deny him, and which he would be able to use to the advantage of his employer.

THE CANADIAN HIGH COMMISSIONER.

Sir A. T. GALT has sailed for England to enter on his official duties at the Court of St. James as Canadian High Commissioner. It is only natural that the Opposition press should set up a howl and tell untruths as to the cost the new office will be to Canada. The Freeman says it will cost the Dominion $20,000 a year, but when this paper went exaggerating at all no one can blame it for making the figures just as large as suited its fancy. In speaking of the Freeman, it reminds us to say that a large number of good Irishmen and Irishmen's sons in this Province think that paper incapable of misrepresentation or contradiction. Here however is a clipping from the last Freeman—it has dwindled down to a weekly again by the way—on Sir Alexander:

He is a man of marked ability, but he is notoriously unstable politically, and in business matters he is visionary to a degree which only those who know him thoroughly can even imagine.

"Notoriously unstable" mind, yet in the next breath Mr. Anglin objects to his appointment because—

"He has long been notoriously an advocate of Canadian Independence."

From the Ex-Speakers own statements Sir Alexander has not been "notoriously unstable" in his "advocacy of Canadian Independence" and beyond this all, though his partiality to Canadian Independence is so distasteful to the loyal bosom of Mr. Timothy Warren Anglin, it is so "notoriously unstable" it is only fair to assume he will soon forsake his rebellious principles.

THE GRAND SOUTHERN.

This Bill has passed the House with flying colors, as will be seen in another column. We never for a moment doubted the success of this Bill, but what did annoy us was that any man should be so ignorant and so presumptuous as to think he could come here with a few dollars and buy up our Local Legislature. Had the man remained home, the Bill would have got less votes, for many a member opposed to the Bill, believing the creature to be on his track, for the purpose of buying him, voted the other way.

Mr. White for Carleton, spoke against the Bill, and it is related that as soon as his speech was ended he went outside and received his reward from Mr. Kay. The reward was a pass over the company's road, ad in. Too dear for Mr. White, but too cheap for his vote!

The most complimentary remarks were passed on Mr. Green, as he sat in the House, each day during the discussion. He scorned to lobby this one, or tag around after the other, though Mr. Kay who was in general disfavor with the people did both, and seemed never half so much at home as when doing some mean action like that.

Is it not outrageous that any man should attempt to bribe the honorable, gentlemen who sit upstairs? Mind there is no insinuation in this against the integrity of the Upper House, but attempts are being made to bribe the members thereof nevertheless.

THE LOWEST OCCUPATION YET.

THERE is no act, however degrading, but some low person can be found to do it. We congratulate Mr. Amasa E. Killam in having secured in the Sun's editor a man who is not above descending to acts that a man of principle or honor would scorn to soil his hands in. It is now insinuated that Attorney General Fraser is the authority whence we derive our information on Mr. Elder's eligibility to sit and vote in the Legislature. We simply deny this, but repeat

"we are acting under the best legal advice in the country." But the marks of the beast are particularly plain in the following:

"The public interest will deepen when the public learn the unholy alliance which Messrs. Adams and Collins would seem to have entered into with Mr. Fraser, Presbyterian, to expel Mr. Elder from the Legislature on the ground of his being a Presbyterian minister."

The Killam hoof marks are here unmistakable, and the object is to sow the seeds of religious discord in the House. Is it not well that the aspirant Surveyor General in the holy alliance is the meek and pious Roman Catholic, P. Gertrude Ryan, Esq., and that in the same holy alliance the Solicitor General is to be that sleek little Roman Catholic pettifogger Robert J. Ritchie, Esq? Amasa and the Sun will have to look elsewhere for an apple of discord!—nor shall His Reverence escape us in the smoke.

A DISGRACEFUL J. P.

RAILWAY MATTERS.
It has just leaked out that when the murderous mob up the line first began to put engines of destruction along the track of the N. B. R. R., that Mr. Gibson and others of the Company asked the protection of Mr. Brown who was, and is a Magistrate. The official answer was, "It serves the Company right that their trains should be thrown from the track: why don't they pay the poor fellows [the wrecking miscreants] their land damages." This is the man who is not only allowed to be at large, but actually to hold a commission from Her Majesty, in his pocket, as Justice of the Peace. The man's commission should be taken from him at once—and we presume the Government will attend to the matter at the next meeting of the Council.
