A Reward of Merit.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Ruth Cameron

Virtue, says the copy-book, is its own reward. On the whole I am inclined to think that is lucky, when I see how often it falls of any other reward. That sounds pessimistic, doesn't it? Well, listen to the following dialogue with me, and I think you'll understand what I mean.

Two women at a church function were arranging some lemonade glasses which had been loaned for the occasion. Said one woman, "Take special care of those glasses with the wreath on them. You know Mrs. H. loaned those; she's a perfect tartar and she'd be terribly disagreeable if anything happened to them. You'd better not let the younger girls touch those."

Said the other woman, "I think those with the monogram are much prettier. Who loaned them?"

"Oh, those are Mrs. R.'s," said the first speaker. "You'd better give them to the younger girls, Mrs. R. is so sweet, you know, she wouldn't make a fuss if they broke a whole dozen!"

How's that for a reward of merit? As a special premium for her disagreeable manner, the tartar lady had special care given to her glasses.

and undoubtedly received specially elaborate thanks.

While the other woman was rewarded for her sweetness and forbearance by having her property handed over to the tender mercies of the least trustworthy waitresses.

And yet isn't that a thoroughly typical case? Don't we all have a tendency to handle with care those people who are disagreeably tenacious of their rights, and to take unfair advantage of those who are good tempered and unselfish?

It is usually the disagreeable member of the family who receives the most attention, and whose paths are made pleasant for him by the sacrifices of the rest; while the most kind-hearted and generous member of the family is the one most put upon.

In the dormitory in which I lived at college, there was one girl so sweet tempered and unselfish that her name was a synonym for these qualities, and yet, instead of treating her especially well, many of the other girls made a convenience of her and then laughed at her behind her back for letting them do it.

And so, if you reckon in terms of appreciation and gratitude, it does not seem as if unselfishness and sweetness of temper paid.

Isn't it fortunate that there are some people in the world who think these qualities are worth while even if they don't pay.

Wonderful Cures Reported in Germany.

The use of simple herbs as remedies instead of the more concentrated and usually more dangerous inorganic substances, has been revived very widely of late. In Germany a new school of physicians has arisen which throws out almost a whole of the pharmacopoeia and relies on an adaptation of the method of wild animals in curing themselves. . . . N. Y. World.

It was Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., who first advocated the extended use of some of our native roots, such as Golden Seal and Oregon Grape root, mandarin and queen's root, black cherybark. These are the chief ingredients in Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so well and favorably known for nearly half a century. A harmless cleanser and stomach tonic that nature has provided.

J. DONALD MATTHESON of Ossining, N. Y. says: "I suffered for over five years with what the doctors told me was dilated condition of the stomach, associated with a catarrhal condition of some, and nervous heart." I had tried enough nux, bismuth, gentian, rhubarb, etc., to float a ship and naturally thought there was no cure for me, but after reading what eminent doctors said of the curative qualities of the ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery" I gave it a fair trial. Took the "Discovery" and also the "Pile-Solvent" and can truthfully say, I am feeling better now than I have in years. I cheerfully give permission to print this testimonial, and if any "doubting Thomases" writes me I will "put him wise" to the best all-around medicine in the country to-day."

Fashions and Fads.

The narrow collar ruche has been revived.

Short evening wraps are very fashionable.

Navy blue holds its own with the newer shades.

The kimono sleeve seems to be with us to stay.

There is a great vogue for crepe de chine lingerie.

There is a tendency to the long waist lines this season.

Plumes are wonderfully shaded, no colors being used.

All the hats are very youthful in design and appearance.

Some walking costumes are made of ceise mummy cloth.

The surplice line is followed in many of the new blouses.

Most all of the trimming of the new millinery is at the back.

Pearl and smoked pearl-buttons are used to trim modish gowns.

Veils most worn have lace patterns and are in black and white.

With lingerie and black satin gowns bright green hose are worn.

Check materials in gay colors are to be combined with plain materials.

The new hats are trimmed with rich ribbons in tall loops like wings.

A novelty introduced this season is cotton goods with a beaded border.

The blouses with the contrasting sleeve is a feature of the new fashioning.

Black and white, which has been so much worn, is now a thing of the past.

Quantities of ribbons are to be seen on the graduating frocks this season.

Suits of moire are to be much worn when the cloth costume is discarded.

The long, pointed slippers of the Parisiennes are expected to be fashionable.

The Indian silk crepe is the most popular and is worn in many odd designs.

Other street suits are made of lightweight broadcloth, poplin, ratine or diagonal serges.

The sleeveless jacket has taken a permanent place in the new fashions this spring.

On many gowns underbodies of cream chiffon, lace or net are used, forming deep chemisettes and full sleeves, which extend below the short sleeves fashioned of the material used for the skirt and blouse.

The following despatches are illuminating; and in view of the fact that it is proposed to enter upon the building of the Reid Sanatoria the coming summer, with a consequent large expenditure on the part of the Government of this Colony, to provide for the upkeep of this sanatoria, it might be well to make haste slowly. And since the plans have taken until the summer of 1913 to mature, by all means let us wait until Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann, the Berlin specialist, is in Toronto to-day, where he will treat several patients for tuberculosis with his celebrated turtle serum and deliver an address before the medical men. He received a cordial welcome in Ottawa and for the first time told how he discovered his "cure." He spoke in English.

"Since the discovery of tuberculin it became a well known and recognized fact that in the bacillus itself were to be found the antigens—that means the substance which contains or produces the curative bodies. During these last twenty-three years all efforts were therefore directed toward extracting and isolating the effective elements with different methods, by chemical, thermic, mechanical and biological procedures.

"But all previous methods for the preparation of remedies for tuberculosis originated from toxic, virulent bacilli of the human or bovine tuberculosis and in spite of all efforts nobody succeeded in removing the virulence and toxicity of these cultures. Consequently it often occurred that the various tuberculin had a damaging or at least endangering effect upon the patients. Besides, these inclusive measures damaged the very delicate and easily destructible antigens.

"Therefore arose the task of finding a substance which would prove absolutely harmless, even in big doses and which contained, if possible, all specific properties of the bacillus existing in its toxicity and virulence; it therefore had to be an avirulent and atoxic bacillus.

"But one more thing had to be accomplished, and that was that this avirulence, this lack of pathogenic qualities, should not be acquired by any incisive procedure on the cultures or by chemical conditions. There had to be found a bacillus of natural avirulence and it had to remain avirulent and atoxic in the tubercular as well as in the non-tubercular individual.

"Inasmuch as it is natural that every method of deadening the bacilli, even the mildest, alters the fine molecular structure of the bacillus, it followed that only a live bacillus could be used.

"The qualities necessary for such a remedy had therefore to be as follows: It had to consist of genuine live bacilli which had remained intact from all additions and alterations and had to be of natural and complete avirulence and atoxicity.

"In former years I used human tubercle bacilli which had been rendered avirulent artificially. But I discarded this method completely because it was too dangerous and the results gave too little encouragement. The desired results I obtained immediately when I succeeded in finding a bacillus which originated from a cold-blooded animal, the turtle.
