

A New Order of Protestant Nuns. (From the New York Herald.) By the steamer Celtic of the White Star Line, there have been expected since Saturday three distinguished ladies of the Protestant Episcopal Order of the Sisters of All Saints, or, as they are sometimes called from the character of their mission and labors, "Sisters of the Poor."

Sister Helen is a daughter of the late Captain Rowden, of the Royal Navy of England, and from her first taking of the veil, in which she was the third member of the order, she has signalled her modest and unassuming self, by acts of the most wonderful nature and of the kindest womanhood.

The Queen sent to Sister Helen to thank her for what she had done at Manchester and to ask her service at the bedside of that old friend of the Royal Family, Earl Deveraux, of Knowle, who was dangerously sick.
