A WOMAN WHO HUNTED GOATS.

Mary Trowbridge Townsend's Account of Sport in the State of Washington.

"He scorns the protection of a coat which changes color with the autumn leaves, and proudly flaunts at all seasons the white of the overlying snow. He has neither the fatal inquisitiveness of the plains antelope, the timidity of the deer, nor the cunning of the sheep. He is as deliberate as a bear, and, if approached from above, as reckless as a caribou. The Rocky Mountain goat is not a true goat, but an antelope that masquerades in goat's clothing. He is unique in living where other game would die, and dying where other game would live. He is not found in mountains, nor in circus tents. Only his mounted skin is found in such places."

Mary Trowbridge Townsend writes that the mountain which she sought and killed near Lake Chelan in the State of Washington, having hunted elk, sheep, and other big game so much that some new sport was wanted. She saw her first goat on the little steamer on her way to the lake, much the same as the tenderfoot visitor to the Adirondacks occasionally sees deer from the stage, but it was not until she and her companion started next day with a guide that she learned some peculiarities that makes goat hunting different from most other kinds of hunting.

For instance, there was no special place for hunting. The goats were among the mountains high up, but in no particular place, and they had to be hunted on the hit or miss fashion of a tarpon fisherman. They traveled for hours over slippery pine carpets, over sharp loose shale, over hot, jagged rocks, zigzagging along and taking to a goat trail eagerly, since there the walking was easier. At night they camped without having seen a goat.

Next day they started again, and saw a goat on a distant bench, acting as if he was meditating deeply, or in a sort of lethargy. On looking down they saw a small bunch of goats a quarter of a mile away. They slid down, and when the 40-70 rifle rang out twice a nannie and a billy had died. It was compensating luck. The fatigue, the climbing, the thirst, and all the discomforts were forgotten in the success as they stood beside the dead game. But they had a weary time of it getting back to the lake: tumbling down a dry water-course, over logs and tangles of "devil's walking sticks," around or over boulders. At last, abandoning the effort to get out that night, four miles from the home camp, they scrambled up a bed in the gully, rolled themselves up in their blankets, and went to sleep. In the morning a little stream of water was found to have started down the gully, and from this they quenched their thirst, and went on, soon getting to the lake.

Mrs. Seleste Coon, Syracuse, N.Y., writes: "For years I could not eat many kinds of food without producing a burning, excruciating pain in my stomach. I took Parlin's Pills according to directions under the head of 'Dyspepsia or Indigestion.' One box entirely cured me. I can now eat anything I choose without distressing me in the least." These pills do not cause pain or griping, and should be used when a cathartic is required.

WENT THROUGH THE TIES.

Mr. Annis, a blacksmith living near Belmont, had a trick horse that can walk, trot, and break shafts. Mr. Annis was driving along York street last night about 9 o'clock in a democrat wagon, and when near the power house the horse took fright at the buzz of the machinery and bolted on to the different streets of the city. The rig had two occupants, who were given a rare shake-up, until the horse took a drop through the ties, and the driver was extricated from his uncomfortable position by the aid of planks. The animal sustained no injury beyond a scratch or two. The shafts of the wagon were broken. A crowd of about 200 people congregated in about five minutes at the bridge.

The monthly meetings are held on the second Friday of each month in the Somerset Hall, at 4 o'clock, when all interested in child-saving will be heartily welcomed, and every facility given for disseminating the knowledge of and the need of such a society in our city. Particulars may be obtained on application to Mr. Thos. R. Parker, president, or to Joseph Sanders, inspector."

LAI'D AT REST.

The remains of the late Mr. Wm. Greenwood, of London West, were laid at rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The burial services were performed by Rev. B. Clement, of the London West Methodist Church, of which deceased was a member. A number of handsome floral tributes were sent to the family to be placed on the casket, as tokens of respect for the deceased and sympathy for those left behind. Among these was a beautiful cross, bearing the words at the foot—"At Rest." This was presented by Mr. J. H. Chapman & Co. of which Miss Kate Greenwood is a member. The cortege was one of the largest ever seen in the city, and was attended by many of the most prominent men in the city. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Alex. Currie, J. D. Sanby, Robert Green, Wm. Evangelist Meikle Severely Denounces Some Social Customs

Christ Church Reopened After Notable Improvements.

The Dean Is Reminiscent—Rev. Thos. Wilson in the City—Anniversary of Mr. Talling's Induction.

Christ Church, Wellington street, was reopened yesterday after the renovations which have been carried on during the past few weeks. The church has been handsomely carpeted throughout; the pews have been grained; a new lectern and pulpit, with massive brass railings, have been placed in position, and the pipe organ has been artistically repainted, regilded and revarnished, and now stands at the north side of the building. The frescoing and painting of the walls, pillars and ceiling of the edifice have also been prettily touched up. These repairs, which cost several hundred dollars, greatly improve the appearance of the interior of the church, making it decidedly pretty and pleasing. The congregations at both services were charmed with the alterations.

Very Rev. Dean Innes occupied the pulpit in the morning, and was assisted in the service by the rector, Rev. J. H. Moorhouse. In the evening Rev. Canon Dann delivered the sermon, and Rev. E. N. English, principal of Hellmuth College, assisted in the service. Excellent music was furnished by the choir, both morning and evening, under the able leadership of Mr. James T. Dalton. In the morning Mr. J. Coates Lockhart sang a tenor solo, "The Promise of the Kings," in admirable voice. In the evening, during the offering Mr. Dalton gave a baritone solo, and Mr. A. Gammel took the solo part of the anthem.

In the course of his sermon the dean fell into an interesting reminiscence. "I remember," he said, "the laying of the corner stone in 1862. I can recall its consecration and opening by the Right Rev. Bishop of Huron, Bishop Cronyn. It was the second Church of England in London, and a comparatively small place, with a population of about 12,000. I remember the heartiness with which the work was entered upon and carried to a successful issue without a cent of debt, and above all, I can see before me the faces of those earnest workers who worshipped in the congregation, and all of whom, I believe, were sincere and devoted friends of mine. Oh, how few remain!—one here and one there—the great majority have gone to their eternal rest. But I must not sadden this glad occasion by recalling the memories of the past. Since those days you as a congregation have passed through many vicissitudes and yet through all have sustained the character manifested at the beginning. The amount of money raised in this church is so insignificant that I am sure what has been done in the past will be repeated now, so that tomorrow morning no debt will remain."

DENOUNCING DANCING.

The world, its amusements, the flesh and the devil were attended to by Evangelist Meikle, at St. Andrew's Church, last night. He spoke strongly against dancing, as being the first step to gambling. Society men and Christians should give up the practice, which was carried on to an alarming extent. The clubs in London were not better in his opinion than clubs in other places, which were general rum-snap. He said: "I wouldn't give a snap of my finger for the rum or the cards posted up in these resorts. Why should club men want to get away from their wives, mothers, brothers, sisters or friends and go to such places? My honest conviction is that they want to get away so that they can tell stories which they couldn't tell before their friends, and have a real good time otherwise. I tell you we need the women and their refining influences. Men have no business to go away to places where there are no ladies, to give a right spirit to their transactions." Even the boys not out of their teens were forming clubs, he said. "Worse sins than drinking and gambling were committed in them, and all under the guise of nice buildings and a little money."

Mr. Meikle then condemned the modern dance, which he said was a western invention—the devil's latest strategy. Men and women never danced together in eastern countries. Continuing he said: "I believe it would do the young ladies a little good if they skipped and danced a little more than they do. Society people say they cannot entertain their guests for a whole evening without a little dance. Well, all I have to say is that it is a very poor compliment to the brains of society if they cannot spend an evening without getting up and hopping around like—why, you could get a Punch and Judy show or something of that kind. The Church of Christ has been against the modern dance. I can tell you that some of the Methodists of Canada are beginning to dance, and I often say to the people, 'Lord, help the rest of us when the Methodists begin to dance.' When the standard in the Church of Christ is getting so low that the Methodists are beginning to dance, Lord, have mercy on the rest of us."

The speaker also alluded to dancing as a means by which women fell, and said that in the city of Ottawa 212 women passed through a Miss Wright's care in one year, and those 212 women were only the women who were tired of their immoral ways. The men who were sent to Ottawa to make the laws were the greatest violators of the law. The majority of the fallen women in cities came from country places. The theater was another wrong; it was rotten to the core. Men had tried to reform it, but gave the job up in despair. A reformed theater would be sent to Ottawa to make the laws. The theater in London was pretty well conducted. Mothers and fathers who assisted in keeping up a theater were only training the children to attend it.

INTERESTING ANNIVERSARY.

Yesterday was the seventh anniversary of the induction of Rev. M. P. Talling, of St. James' Presbyterian Church. In the morning the pastor, in his discourse, dealt with the many changes that had taken place since he had taken the pulpit. The address was a very interesting one.

Johnston's Fluid Beef Strengthens.

The fact is generally known that pure water appears blue when light is transmitted through a sufficient thickness of it, and that when opaque particles are suspended in it the hue of the water is greenish. But when pure water looks blue when light passes freely through it, yet when it is contained in a deep, opaque receptacle, like the basin of a lake or the ocean, it ought to absorb all light and look black. Experience shows, however, that the deepest parts of the Mediterranean, for instance, appear not black, but intensely blue. This has been supposed to be caused by minute particles held in suspension, but the recent experiments of Prof. Spring, at Lago Maggiore, suggest a different explanation. He has found that warmer currents passing through pure water interrupt its transparency, even when the difference of temperature is very slight. Such currents may cause deep water to appear blue by reflecting light back from its depths through the transparent layers above. This, it is suggested, explains the fact that fresh water lakes are more transparent in winter than in summer, because in winter currents of heated water are not traversing them. Even the shadow of a mountain falling on a lake may increase the transparency of the water by cooling the surface.—Youth's Companion.
