Spells of War For Japan Sald To be Quite insigniflcant.

Pekin, Sept. 9.—Liaoyang at sunrise of September 4 presented a dismai spectacle. The Russian settlement was burning and a heavy pall of smoke hung over the old town. Frightened Chinese were, hiding from the Japanese troops, while the latter, more or less dead beat, were bivouacking in the suburbs. The attaches were informed that they could not visit the fown, owing to the fact that a certain number of Russian rearguard companies had entrenched themselves in the centre of the Chinese town and in the streets fighting was proceeding.

No Appointment as Yet Owing to the Large Number of Applications.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 11.—(1:20 a. m.)—The war office is reluctantly disposed to admit that, with the defeat of the Russians at Liaoyang, dep arted all hope of turning the tide of the war this year. Patiently and doggedly, in spite of successive reverses by land and sea, General Kuropatkin's friends had pinned their faith in his turn the scale, they concede another period of waiting. Kuropatkin must retire and await reinforcements and start a new campaign next year. But, disappointed as they are, and discour aging as the situation is, no word is heard in favor of suing for peace. Rus sia will be victorious in the end. The war must continue—if not this year, then the next: Military officers who are familiar with the skill, care and ardious labor with which the positions on both sides of the Taitse river were prepared at Liaoyang, consider that this historic battle will consecrate the flanking movement in military annals. Redoubled trenches, gun pits, entanglements, dit ches, tunnels and every method of protecting known to military engineering skill proved useless against a single turning movement and mobility. Strategy throughout the campaign has vanquished fixed fortified positions; and flanking operations again and again have forced the abandonment of the most elaborate entrenchments, some times without the firing of a shot.

Unless the unexpected happens, the withdrawal of General Kuropatki n's army above Tie pass, the believe, marks the end of the campaign for this year, the Russians wintering at Harbin, with their rear-guard at Tie pass, and the Japanese at Liaoyang, with their advanced base at Mukden,

According to the best information from the front, both armies are now tired and resting after the hard days

The general opinion is that the Japanese will again push on as soon as the rains cease and the roads are dry. In the meantime General Kuropatkin is enjoying the advantages of the railroad. He has sent north his bagnot make a stand at Mukden if the Japanese come on again in earnest, but that he will retire at least to Tie pass. Once through the pass the general impression in military circles is that the Japanese will not attempt further august.

Exceptional precautions have been taken to prevent the Japanese from cutting communications below the pass. Not exceeding two months re main for military operations this fall, and despite reports from Tokio of a winter campaign, the most competent critics who are familiar with the rigors of the Manchurian winter do not think that the Japanese will attempt it.

Paris, Sept. 10.—The publication of the terms of the Japanese-Korean treaty brought about a renewal of the statement from authoritative quarters that Russia and the other powers are not bound by a treaty made under stress, and it is maintained that Korea's status will be settled only when the terms of peace are arranged, Japanese authority in the meantime being merely that of RUSSIANS DEMORALIZED.

Paris, Sept. 10.—French government authorities recently received advices from disinterested parties who have just returned from Manchuria. One of them, though strongly favorably to Russia, says that the Russian army is much broken and demoralized.

It is added that the Siberia railroad is working perfectly, six trains running over it daily.

The officials here attach importance to these statements.
