THE TRADE QUESTION ABROAD. Are France and the United States pro with regard to either, but how are we to acus which way the world is going. On this times happens that while a government inclination now to take the back track. The tariffs of Russia, Austria, Italy and there were nothing more to be said. Well, this trade question an unsparing hand, and that evictions were the United States. It has to do with philosophy, surely, but there is about it so much of the hard and practical character that we should expect to find it better compreheuded in Chicago or Buffalo than in Leipsic or Berlin. Admit that in art and philosophy the Americans must be pupils of Europe, do they stand much in need of old world tuition as regards trade and money making? We should say not. We present this view. If the United States alone, of all the nations of the earth, declared for protection it would be an argument of tremendous force in favor of that system. And for this reason, that the system had been deliberately adopted by a very practical, money-making people. If a Yankee don't know how to "trade" in the matter either of a forty dollar horse or a million bushels of wheat, who does? It almost breaks the force of this argument to have to add that protection carries the day at the head-quarters of art and philosophy, on the continent of Europe, as much as it does in the new world.

UNHAPPY IRELAND. The most recent news from Ireland is not! encouraging. Murders, and outrages next to murder, are increasing. A strange spectacle is presented. After centuries of grievous wrong, which the government has aggravated rather than redressed. a change before. The very measures taken to quiet further violence. Conceding something to the popular demand seems to be worse than conceding nothing at all. We may conjecture, though of this we cannot be sure, that had a tory government remained in power, and all measures of land reform been sternly refused, Ireland would have been more tranquil than it is to-day. We cannot be sure of this, but things look that way. Admit that the redress of grievances. as far as the law goes, is yet only partial and far short of what is required, it seems extraordinary that conceding something to the people should rouse them to greater fury than if nothing had been conceded at all. The present rebellion in Ireland, for it is really nothing short of that, happens out of time. If it was ever to happen at all, it ought to have happened years ago, when a government that refused in power. But that was exactly the time when it did not happen. With a tory government in power, conceding nothing, but holding stern repression in readiness. Ireland was quiet, and rents were paid: that is, by those who were able to pay them. A liberal government comes in, land and Scotland wish they could get the ike of, but cannot. Immediately the counry is in a blaze, the people have got some-

THE USE OF THE CAT.

THE OUTLAW'S END.

Mission Catholic Journal on the Assas sination of Jessie James. (From the Western Watchman, St. Louis, Mo.) On Monday morning last there died in St. Joseph, in this state, the most noted highwayman of ancient or modern times. All glory to Crittenden and the Ford boys. We say, he died, for his death was natural result of the life he had led. We are very glad Jesse James is gone and re joice at the manner of his exit. Take the case of stealing from private employers. Just now one of our largest wholesale dry-goods houses in Toronto is agitated over the discovery of thefts by some of their hands. Eleven men or boys were suspended; three have been taken back; some of the stolen property has been recovered; for a part of the rest the guilty was born at Lancaster, Glengarry, in 1833, of Scottish parents, and has been for nine-teen years a religious. The death of Sister Dubuc deeply affected £ister McGillivray, who had been aling from December with heart disease, and who, after the demise of one with whom she had been so long associated and whom she loved so well, spoke of her own departure, and even fixed upon Good Friday as the date of such event.
