By his side on the same seat were piled a number of satchels and bags, ornamented with big silver initials and a square crown over them, which, I suppose, passed for a crest. Every other seat in the car except the one occupied by the satchels was taken, when a large man got in at New Brunswick, and went up and down the aisle twice, looking for a seat. Finally he approached the long young man, pointed to the satchel, and said, quietly:

The large man did not wait to hear more, but he grabbed the satchels one after another and sent them spinning up and down the aisle as Scotch curlers play their game on the ice. Then the large man sank his 300 pounds heavily into the seat, pinning the dude in the corner as though he were wedged there for life. There was a silence of at least ten minutes, and then the great swell, who was more pallid than ever, said, wary meekly:

"May I go and get my traps, sir?"
"Certainly," said the large man, rising and making way for him politely. "Go and get them by all means." So the lank and languid and extraordinarily dressed young man want from one end of the car young man went from one end of the car to the other, gathered up all his belongings, and returned to the sea' which was now quite fully eccupied by me 300-pounder.

Mrs. A. Nelson, Brantford, writes:

"I was a sufferer from chronic dyspepsia for eleven years. Always after eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, caused a drooping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Popplewell, chemist, of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languid feeling has all gone, and food does not lie heavy on my stomach. Others of my family have used it with best results."

What is that! "
"Well, it is the fact that you have never yet invited me to call on you."
"That's easily explained," said Gilhooly, yawning and stretching himself; "you see when I come to visit you, if you make me tred with your talk I can get up and go, but if you call on me at my home I may not be able to get rid of you without being impolite. See?"

Dr. McSweeney, commenting on the case to the World reporter, said: "This teacher was allowed to go into the service when she was 16 years old. She was in good health, but dependent parents kept her at work without a respite. For twenty-two years she never failed to be at her desk and never lost an hour. The hard work and anxiety gradually undermined her health, and when she came to me, she was a physical wreck. During the last few years Thave had scores of such cases. Many break down and are driven from the service, while others are ambitious to succeed and give up only at death's door."

This is a sad and illustrative case. Thousands of women in dependent positions literally work their lives out in the struggle for existence. The wan face, the wearled expression, the bloodless pallor, the depressing headaches, cold feet, hot head, fickle appetite and decreasing vigor are all ignored, for "they must have bread or interest."

Lang of 146 Wellington street west, Toronto, Canada, was in such a state utterly broken down with a complication west, Toronto, Canada, was in such a state, atterly broken down with a complication of the very worst sort of female disorders, ahe looked only to death for release and relief. Physician after, physician was appealed to in vain, and just as despair presented itself, a faint hope dawned upon her. She followed the counsel of her sister women, gave herself thorough constitutional treatment with Warner's safe cure, and now she says, "I am as healthy as if I had never been one day ill. In August, 1883, I had my last attack and since that time I have never had a physician visit me. I am the very picture of health." She was ill for years, but not bedridden; local ulcerations made-life a conetant trial. Burning pains in the stomach and back, relieved only by vomiting and harsh measures were followed by hot head, cold feet and limbs, sore abdomen, ending in occasional local paroxysms of great agony. John L. Elsworth, M.D., of Brocklyn, N.Y., a graduate of Wuertzburg, Germany, says of this preparation that "it is particularly valuable in the treatment of female complaints," and such disorders.
