The Growth of Children. It has occurred to a Danish pastor in charge of a large institution for children to observe the process of their growth, and endeavor to ascertain the laws by which it is determined. He has now been engaged on the subject for five years, weighing and measuring some 130 children daily during all that time. The children are measured once a day, but they are weighed four times—in the morning, before and after dinner, and at night. Mr. Hansen asserts that the figures thus obtained prove the existence of three well-marked periods of growth in the year, further divisible into some thirty lesser stages. Back and weight are acquired between August and December. From December to April there is a further increase, but at a greatly diminished rate. From April till August the weight and bulk gained in the spring period are lost; so that at the beginning of August the weight is almost the same as at the close of the previous December. The growing up, week upon that of broad industriously; they are never idle; they till the land, manure it, plant it and keep it in perfection. No foot of it is sown with weeds, nor is allowed to be waste. From early morning till evening some one or other is busily engaged on the soil, and in consequence the soil is so lively grateful to them for it, and so ready to receive the seed, that it is a wonder that the crops are not more abundant. The soil is so well, as it is always ready for the care and attention bestowed upon it. It may be mentioned that the small, but well-built dwelling houses which stand in a corner of the land, and also the cow-house, have been bought and paid for by their savings, and now all they have to pay for their snug little places is an annual ground rent of about $4 or so. Of course, had there been scores of such small town, vegetables and fruits would have been cheapened; but there is ample room in the cottages for all our large cities and towns for thousands of families to make a comfortable and pleasant living. If they had the mind and the determination to try it.

Handy to Have. Every household should keep some ready remedy at hand for painful diseases, and among attacks of inflammation and accidental injuries. Such a remedy is best found in Haggard's Yellow Oil for internal and external use. It cures rheumatism, sore throat, croup, neuralgia, lame back, sprains, bruises and burns.

Put Milk on the Stove. Durdette in the Brooklyn Gazette. A "man writes" in the household department of a family paper "thanks a wife and kind Providence that when he was a boy his mother taught him to cook, wash dishes and tidy up the kitchen, although he had three sisters that almost rivalled him in that kind of man with that sort of mother and that sort of sisters may be very thankful for that kind of training, but will be a thousand dollars his wife doesn't attend the praise service. Do you know, my son, how Lucifer, mightiest of the angels, fell? He was on such one day and saw a man noising around in the kitchen, among the pots and pans and tea, awe-stricken family. He watched until he saw the man wring out a dish rag, and then he swore right out: he couldn't help it. Of course he couldn't be allowed in heaven after that, we all know that; but then, son, consider the provocation.

Bar Three Acres and a Cow. From the Fort Scott Gazette. In the near vicinity of a thriving manufacturing town in Scotland, with a population of about 18,000 inhabitants, many of whom have small gardens, there live a worthy couple and their six children, who do not so much land as "three acres" but only about the one-half of this quantity, and no more. They have got the "cow," however, and a pig or two, and they raise a good deal of market produce, such as strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, stonies, cabbage, etc., in their season. Husband
