WATFORD

You can have all these helps on the farm.

IN the best lighted farm homes, brilliant, clean electric light floods every room, cellar, stairways, stables, and other buildings at the touch of a button. These folks also have running water in bathroom, laundry, kitchen and outbuildings by turning a tap. No one turns the separator, grindstone, fanning mill, or churn—the "F" Power and Light Plant does all these jobs as quickly and easily as it pumps water.

The womenfolk are not slaves to the wash tub, and there are no lamps to fill and clean—the "F" Plant ends such drudgery. They save time and labour by using an electric iron and vacuum cleaner. The farm help is contented, does more work and becomes attached to the place.

You can live under the same happy and prosperous conditions.

Call in the first time you are near and learn how the "F" Power and Light Plant will save dollars, and work for you.

The Shields Appeal Case

At Osgoode Hall weekly court before Judge Lennox last week the following decision was given:—Re Shield: Shields v. London & Western Trusts.—W. E. Fitzgerald (Watford) for plaintiff, appealed from report of Local Master at London. E. St. C. Leitch (St. Thomas), for administrator of estate of James Shields, J. D. Shaw (St. Thomas) for L. & W. Trusts, administrators of W. B. Shields, W. Law for Annie Shields, et al. Appeal dismissed with costs. The question of who should pay the costs reserved until 20th September.

The case has to do with the distribution of the assets of the estate of the late James Shields, a prosperous farmer, who left 500 acres in the townships of Moss and Brooke. He also left five sons. To one of his sons he gave 100 before his death. Another farm of 100 acres was decided to another son by the administrators following the death of the father. The litigation grew out of the attempt of these two to share in the balance of the estate, the rest of the family arguing that the 100-acre farm represented their share.

NEVER FREE FROM TROUBLE

Border Between United States and Mexico Has Always Been Lawless Strip of Country.

The border between the United States and Mexico has been for a long time one of the most troubled, romantic and lawless in the western hemisphere. Not only do the Mexican revolutionists periodically start something by shooting or raiding across the line, but this border also affords one of the finest opportunities in the world for smuggling. A large part of the opium which is consumed by addicts in this country comes by way of the Mexican border, and an illicit business in arms and ammunition goes the other way.

In the old days stealing horses in Mexico, driving them across the river and selling them in the United States was a thriving industry and it is probably still carried on to some extent. In the old days it was known politely as the "wet horse trade," because the horses were often sold when they were still wet.

The border country is admirably endowed by nature for these lawless doings. It is flat, near-desert country, too dry for farming, but not too dry to support heavy thickets of chaparral and mesquite, which makes one of the densest and most impenetrable covers in the world. That part of the country which lies within the big bend of the Rio Grande is an especially dense jungle of this kind. It swarms with game. The desert white tall deer, the peccary, the wild turkey and the Mexican quail are abundant. This supply of wild meat makes it easy for a Mexican outlaw who knows where the water holes are to hide out for long periods.

Superfluous.
"How do you do, sir!" suavely saluted the gent at the door. "I am offering, to the few persons in each community who are of sufficient culture to appreciate it, a valuable literary work. This book—"

"Book, har?" interrupted Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark. "I had a book—forget now what 'twas about, though—for a good while, but about six months ago the baby took and gnawed it till it fell to pieces and wasn't no good on earth. No use to buy another'n till he gets old enough to understand what a book is fur."—Kansas City Star.

Preserving British Fruit.

American methods of fruit preserving, which are little practiced in Great Britain, are being brought to the notice of the rural population by speakers and writers, with a view to effecting a saving of the home-grown fruit that is likely to go to waste on account of the sugar shortage. Newspapers published in the country towns now-a-days carry articles explaining the sugarless canning process and suggesting that the work be undertaken locally on as large a scale as the fruit production of a district will warrant. It is pointed out that in view of the urgent need for conservation of all food supplies and the extreme shortage of sugar, the methods suggested present many attractions and some advantages over the home bottling and jamming of surplus fruit. The object is to preserve what would otherwise be wasted and to place it on the local markets at the season when fruit is scarce.

Fertilizers.

It must be borne in mind that fertilizers cannot, and will not, take the place of cultivation and good seed. They are not stimulants, but are direct food materials, and, applied judiciously and economically, either to make up the deficiencies of farmyard manure or in specialized intensive farming, good results will follow.

Keep Flowers on Farm Lawn.

Even if labor is scarce an effort should be made to have at least a few flowers and flowering shrubs on the farm lawn. Beauty has a value that cannot be measured in dollars.
