The P R E F A C E.

IN the Preface to my former Volume, I have accounted for the »Defign, Method and Stile of those Relations of my Travels: what I have more to fay of that kind, is chiefly with reference to what I now offer the Reader. Thus far I have thought fit to change my Method in this Volume, as to divide it into diflinct Parts, because the Matters it treats of are so different from one another, in point of Time, or other Circumstances: but still in each Part I have taken the fameCourfe of making severalChapters, that this Volume might retain some Uniformity with the other.

The First of these is that Account I promised of my Voyages from Achin in Sumatra, to several places in the E. Indies; of which I forbore to particularize in the former Volume, for Reafons there mentioned. I have now more than discharg'd my self of that Promise: for I have improved my own Observations, efpecially as to Tonquin, by those of some English Gentlemen, who made a confiderable stay in that Kingdom. I am abundantly fatissied my self of their Ability and Integrity; the proper Qualifications in things of this Nature: and could I have obtained their leave, the Reader also should have had the fatisfaction of knowing to whom he was to abscribe several of those Particulars: However, I have taken frequent Occasions to distinguish in general what I faw, from what I was informed of. This Part is the Supplement of what is contained in the former Volume; and compleats the Voyage round the World.

The Second Part contains what relates to the time I fpent in the Bay of Campeachy, either as a Logwood-Cutter, or a Trader to them. This was before I made my Voyage round the World, as the Reader will perceive: and upon this occasion, therefore, I have gone fo far back, as to speak of my first Entrance upon this Rambling kind of Life. For the Account it gives of Campeachy, and the Neighbouring Parts of Incatan and New Spain, Grc. I refer the Reader to the work its felf.

The Third Part is an Account of the Winds, and Weather, Storms, Tides, and Currents of the Torrid Zone, round the World; which may be of use towards the Improvement of Navigation, and that part of Natural History. Tis the substance of what I have remark d or learnt, about things of that kind, in so long a Course of soving
