On Wednesday evening an impromptu oyster supper was given at Lally & Cavanagh's restaurant to which nearly all the competitors sat down and enjoyed a few hours very pleasantly.—The Freeholder.

The Troy Press thinks it will be time enough for Uncle Sam to talk of arbitration in the Venezuela dispute when he has paid England what he owed under the Paris award.

Toronto.

The annual dinner of the Caledonian Society, held at the Walker House last Hallowe'en, turned out to be a regular field night for the members of the 48th Highlanders, who, by the way, were represented in such goodly numbers that the ordinary civilian members of the society seemed sadly out of it.

After the good things provided by mine host Walker had been bestowed where they would do the most good, the toast list was preceded with, and the enthusiasm with which each toast was given, and the replies received, seemed but to increase the further down the list the toast appeared.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers" was drunk by the enthusiasts with feet on the table. At this point Mr. David Walker called out Staff-Sergt. Harp, of the 48th Highlanders, and on behalf of the Caledonian Society, presented him with a gold watch in recognition of his winning the Grand Aggregate at the Dominion Rifle Association meeting at Ottawa. Mr. Walker, Mr. Wm. Simpson and a few others took up the idea of making the presentation, and, in presenting the watch, Mr. Walker said Staff-Sergt. Harp was the hero of the evening and had made a record at Ottawa that was likely to stand for a long time to come. The token of appreciation was, Mr. Walker said, one of the most fitting ever given by the society. The watch presented to Staff-Sergt. Harp is one of the handsomest ever seen in Canada. The movement, which is of nickel and fully jewelled, was made by the celebrated Waltham Watch Company of Waltham, Mass., and is guaranteed to keep accurate time under almost any conditions. The case is of home production, having been made specially for the occasion by the American Watch Case Co. of this city. It is of heavy eighteen karat gold, being beautifully engraved on the front with the emblem of the Caledonian Society, a Scotch thistle, having underneath the motto, "Nemo me impune lacessit" and on the back the regimental crest and motto of the 48th Highlanders. The dome inside bears the following inscription: "Presented to Staff-Sergt. Harp, 48th Highlanders, by the Caledonian Society of Toronto, in recognition of his phenomenal shooting at Ottawa in 1895."

In his reply, Staff-Sergt. Harp returned thanks in a modest and manly fashion. If the Caledonian Society and the regiment were proud of him he could only answer in the words of the old soldier in Irving's Waterloo, who, when the Duke said the regiment was proud of him, answered, "Well then," says I, "I am proud of the regiment." (Loud applause.)

Col. Davidson replied to the toast of the army, navy and volunteers in very felicitous terms. To the remark that he would be a General by-and-bye, the Colonel said he would rather command the 48th than be a General. The presentation to the Staff-Sergeant was one to the whole regiment, which was a child of the Caledonian Society, and he hoped would always remain in its leading strings. (Applause.) He observed that at these gatherings the most of the noise was made by 48th men, which showed that they were still in the cradle of the society. (Laughter.) Major Crosby also replied to the toast, and took occasion to compliment Staff-Sergt. Hogg on his work, and expressed the hope that he would go home to Bisley next year and bring the Queen's Prize to Canada again, as Hayhurst did last year. Major MacDonald made a patriotic speech, in which he called in ringing words for all honor to the men who gave their time, and oftentimes their lives, for the defence of the country. Canadians should never forget that Britain's army and navy were our army and our navy, prepared to stand behind us in conflict with all foes, whether within or without.

It may have been on account of the weather, or it may have been on account of Major-General Gascoigne's first appearance before a Toronto public, but whatever the cause, the Garrison church parade of the 3rd of November was beyond doubt the finest and best ever witnessed, not only in Toronto (but with all due deference to our military friends in Montreal and Halifax), the finest in the Dominion.

Comparison of the parade state, with the parade state of any other city, will prove the truth of this assertion. Long before the hour of assembly the approaches to the drill hall was just one mass of people, and one would think that, instead of a church parade in the city of churches, one was in the midst of stirring times of war in a garrison town.

The people of Toronto may not be as liberal towards the volunteers as many would like them to be, and the cynical ones might say that exhibitions that cost nothing are always well attended, despite all this, the enormous well-behaved crowds that thronged the line of march and patiently awaited the coming of the troops, proved beyond any doubt that the soldiers' boy of Toronto occupy a warm spot in the citizens' hearts, and such grand exhibitions as the one given on the 3rd inst. only tend to enhance the delight that loyal Torontonians always exhibit in referring to their Tommy Atkinses.

Massey Music Hall, it is said, will seat 6,000 people, but as there were about that number of tickets issued, and 2,000 troops as well, someone must have been uncomfortably crowded.

The major portion of the credit for the success of the parade is due to the splendid arrangements made by Lieut.-Col. Buchan, and that they were fully appreciated is amply evidenced by the message of congratulations sent by Major-General Gascoigne to the D.A.G.

It was an awful jam trying to get within gun shot of the saluting base at Queen and Victoria streets, and the marvel is that with so little room the companies preserved anything like the splendid alignment they did.

The greatest sufferers in respect to room were the Queen's Own, who had files dropped to the rear in every company. This looked straggly and detracted from the otherwise magnificent showing made by this regiment.

It seemed to amuse the General to see one of the officers of one of the regiments in a moment of abstraction, salute with a swagger stick as he went past.

It seemed to be Queen's Own day, as their marching, despite the strong companies, all of which were cramped for room, in passing the saluting point both times, was better than either the Grens or Kilties, theirs was the duty band for the church service, theirs was the largest parade, and their representative was on the staff.

In passing the saluting point on Queen street the Kilties, thanks to the want of forethought of their bandmaster, went past to that anything but a Scotch air of "Killaloo," whilst both the Q.O.R. and Grens were played by to their own regimental marches.

The best marching of the day was done
