He says: "We have had a fine season here, and what is left of the berries are looking very good. There are a great many red currants, and we have had a lot of them. The most of this country will not have a crop this year, only the meadows are left, and the armies are harvesting the hay. However, they are going to make sure of a crop netx season, as they are of a crop netx season, as they are getting it all seeded. They have a bt of "Case" motor plows over here, which are much like the 'Waterloo Boy' as they are plow. They are doing a good work, and lots of it. But they will have to get up a little earlier in the morning the records that are coming from the old northwest. The land is in the best of shape, so it pays the army well for the little expense, and a lot of the work is done by the soldiers in spare time, so they are that much to the good at any rate.

"The roads are good and hard, but a little rough. The cars are kept on pretty steady, so it keeps us busy on them, as there are a lot of old ones and take a lot of tinkering to keep them going." hem going Use Graves for Traps.

Our friend could not believe it till he saw it, but we have so much of it that we do not take much notice of it. There is one thing that is remarkable. The Germans go to a great deal of pains in fixing their own men's graves. Some of them have large cement statues, some of which artists have made. There are many of them which statues, some of which artists have made. There are many of them which have ornaments of glass on them which have ornaments of glass on them which would look nice to anyone looking for a keepsake. They have, as a rule, a wire fixed (so as not to be seen), attached to a grenade at the other end, and the person who lifts the glass sets the grenade off, and then is blown up. Pretty cumning, eh?

"But the boys find a little amusement in setting off these crapes (which is forbidden), with a few more rods of wire so as to be safe.

The eyes of both lady and clerk were wandering, for neither saw the other until after the accident occurred. The end of the broom got entangled with the lady's feet and she sprawled in a most ungraceful position on the sidewalk. The clerk assisted her to her feet and, taking her in the store, brushed the dust off her clothing. Fortunately the lady was not hurt.

Conservative Party Gets Surprise When It Learns Prospective Candidate Is Non-Conscription-Many Want E. T. Essery To Stand.

The Conservative party in London is said to be badly split on the conscription issue. It will be difficult to secure a candidate who will have chance of winning and at the same time support the policy of Sir Robert Borden.

One prominent Conservative, who was approached, is said to have surprised his friends by announcing that he would never run on a conscription ticket unless a referendum was taken. Strong Men Scarce.

There are other men who have been mentioned for the place, but the party does not think they are sufficiently strong to win. "The Conservative party today has not a man who can command the vote of the late "Billy" Gray, said one in close touch with the counsels of the party. "We are
