

among our orphans, they feel that, under the divine blessing, this is the best testimony they can bear to this gentleman's valuable services, gratuitously rendered. The Managers have allocated a small sum for the purchase of a testimonial to mark their appreciation of Dr. Ogden's attention and skill, and which is now presented.

Nor have the Managers been careful merely of the bodily wants of the inmates of the Home ; they have established a daily school, of which young ladies have voluntarily taken charge—two each day regularly attending to instruct the children in useful secular knowledge, and also to train them up in the “nurture and admonition of the Lord.” These exertions, the Managers venture to express a hope, will be zealously continued.

In connection with this subject, the Managers would notice with much gratitude, donations of books towards the formation of a library—especially Mrs. Tate's very liberal and highly appreciated gift.

May He whose parting charge to his Apostle was “feed my lambs,” abundantly bless those liberal benefactors, who have so far enabled its officers to bring the Orphan's Home to its present state of efficiency ; and also put it into the hearts of others to follow their good example.
