"Success in Life" (Ottawa Journal) "Students of a United States college grieved its head when, in reply to his query as to why they sought a higher education, they all with one accord replied: 'To make more money.' The conclusion was natural enough, but hardly idealistic, and prompts wonder as to why the whole community should be taxed so heavily to favor the worldly advancement of a comparatively favored few."—Hamilton Spectator.

Perhaps the best value of a college education is to make one's progress through life, if one
