NEW PLAY FOR NEW YORKERS

"Bought and Paid For" Scores a Triumph - Best Comedy in Many a Day

(Actor Davis in New York Sun)
It was a lucky day for Manager Brady and the Playhouse when "The Rack" fell down with such a crash, for it cleared the way for the immediate production of George Broadhurst's "Bought and Paid For," one of the best comedies of New York life that any American playwright has shown in many a long day. Not only is this play immeasurably superior to anything that Mr. Broadhurst has done before, but in one of its characters at least, James Gilley, he has drawn a picture of a parasite which is a creation.

This role of Gilley as portrayed by Frank Craven, and the almost equally droll and human character of his adoring wife as played by Marie Nordstrom, keep the audience in such fits of laughter that the serious story of the play becomes almost of secondary interest, and yet so admirable is the work of Julia Dean and Charles Richman in the leading roles and the telephone girl who marries for money and the young millionaire whose wife deserts him because he haunts her when he is drunk, that the honors of the performance must be divided between these four players.

That Eugene Walter's "Paid in Full" has influenced Mr. Broadhurst in writing this play there can be no doubt. The title of the play suggests the other, and then, again, when you come to analyze the role of Jim Gilley, it is really Walter's Joe Brooks from a different angle. But Gilley is a better drawn character than Brooks for all that, just as his entire "Bought and Paid For" is a better play than "Paid in Full."

There is no single scene in it which equals the interview between the wife and the sea captain in Walter's drama, but the characterizations are superior and the comedy interest is so much greater that it bids fair to appeal to an even wider public. It is a delight to hear an audience roar with laughter as they did at the Playhouse last night, for it was laughter which a great deal of the time had a tearful background. Clever farce as he has proved himself in the past, in this play Mr. Broadhurst never resorts to the farcical touch. He has written a splendid human comedy and given it a serious background which will ring in the ears of the two sisters, Virginia Blaine and her telephone girl, as gentle and refined as the daughter of any lawyer might well be, but Fanny, the telephone girl, by contrast seems a trifle raw. Still she is such a good-hearted soul, and Miss Nordstrom portrays her so admirably, that this is an inconsistency easily forgotten, particularly in view of the comedy recalls.

When the play opens in Robert Stafford's apartments, the millionaire is giving a little dinner to Virginia Blaine, the telephone girl, and her sister Fanny. It is a red-letter night for the Blaine girls, and Fanny's fiancé, Jim Gilley, a thirteen-dollar-a-week shipping clerk, has been invited as a special guest. The curtain falls as Virginia announces her engagement to Stafford.

Daily Hints For the Cook

DEEP APPLE PIE WITH CREAM CHEESE
Bake a nice deep apple pie about three quarters of an hour before dinner. Have small cream cheese pressed through a sieve and mixed with a cup of whipped cream and a little salt. Press through a pastry tube or tin funnel, on top of the dessert. The cheese and cream combinations may also be used on a two-crust apple pie.

CREAMED FISH IN RAMEKINS
Any kind of left-over fish can be creamed in ramekins for luncheon or supper. Onions and shrimps are particularly good in this way. Mince a white onion and brown in a saucepan with a little butter. Add a cup of beef stock and some chopped green peppers. Have ready a pound of shrimp meat and one crab, also shredded. Add a half cupful of cream and cook about 20 minutes, being careful not to burn the mixture. Have the ramekins greased, pour in the fish, cover with bread crumbs, add bits of butter and bake. Left over fish, bone, can be treated in the same way.

Miss Melick will sail on the steamship Franconia, leaving Boston on October 12, and will spend the winter in the southern part of France."

Old state carpet should not be wasted. For it will make good paths to go under the new state carpet. First shake the carpet and then cut out any bad parts; divide the remainder into short lengths; double them, and tack them at the edge of each step, where the thread comes, before laying the new carpet.

Many a man's deficiency in dollars is due to his deficiency in sense.

ROUND WORLD FAIR TO BE OPENED TONIGHT BY MAYOR FRINK

The City Cornet Band Ready to Receive and Entertain Patrons in St. Andrew's Rink

The Round the World Fair, which is being conducted in the St. Andrew's Rink, will be formally opened at 8 o'clock tonight by His Worship Mayor Frink, who will deliver an address. Members of the common council will also be present and the City Cornet Band will, of course, be on hand.

The rink has been transformed into a place of beauty, and everything is ready for the opening. All the booths have been handsomely decorated and it is hoped that the attendance on the opening night will be a record breaker. The fair is being conducted along the lines of an exhibition and prominent business houses have exhibits at the fair.

The King Cole Tea Company have erected a booth where visitors can call and sample their tea. Adjoining this booth is that of Murray & Gregory, exhibiting umbrellas, etc. Then come the exhibits of the Humphrey Leathers Co., and T. J. Phillips. On the left hand side of the rink are the exhibits of W. B. Daley and J. R. Hawley, druggists. Throughout the building are games of every description, including bean-throw, wheel of fortune, fish pond, etc. On the left of the entrance the Cave of the Winds is erected. This is a large cave which contains many mysteries, and is open for investigation for a small fee. All who visit the cave are assured of a good hearty laugh.

In the middle of the rink a large band stand is erected, and music will be supplied each evening. The rink has been illuminated with hundreds of colored electric lights and when they are aglow it will present a very attractive appearance. A small admission fee will be charged and a large attendance is looked for each evening. The fair will be conducted for two weeks.

The members of the band and their friends have gone to much trouble and expense in making preparations for the fair, and it is to be hoped that they will be liberally patronized.

The following is a partial list of the committees in charge: Fancy table—Mrs. Robert McCarthy, Mrs. Driscoll, Miss Nellie Shaw, Anne McQuiggin, Ella Campbell; cherry tree—Mrs. Robert Clark, Misses C. Conolly, and C. Lane; bowling alley—N. Kelly, J. Robinson and K. Nickland.
