The Situation.

The forces that are in array after the Assembly contest, still stand, so far as we can judge, as stated by the Advance last week, viz., twenty-two on the Government side and nineteen opposition, with the chances in favor of several of the least pronounced of the latter party becoming disatistied with would-beleaders in their own ranks. A good many of the more independent oppositionists have, all along, admitted that there was not much to be urged against Mr. Blair's general administration of provincial affairs, their objections to his rule being in reference to matters of local concern. The St. John opposition's great grievance was the appointment of ex-Solicitor-General Ritchie to the police magistracy of that city. It Grand Monthly Drawing, was, there, practically, a square issue between Catholics and Protestants, the opposition perceiving its advantage in the fact that two-thirds of the electors of that constituency are Protestants. It was a desperate course to take, but nothing else could have defeated Provincial-Secretary McLellan, Messrs, Stockton and Alward-backed by the Sun and the Liberal - Conservative machine—have whatever advantage they may be able to reap from a victory won on such a cry.
