HIS DAUGHTER SAFE.

Ira H. Horne was made happy yesterday afternoon by the receipt of a telegram apprising him of the safety of his daughter in the Chicago disaster. After receiving intimation on Wednesday night of the burning of the Iroquois theatre at Chicago, Mr. Horne, with the knowledge that his daughter was a member of the company perorming on that fatal afternoon, passed sleepless night, and was kept in a ate of trying suspense. Hence it is isy to imagine what, delightful news is telegram regarding his daughter's fety brought.

The farmer named his price, and Doc said he would take them all provided they stood his test. Alighting from his buggy, he made the farmer stand with his hands clasped in front of him, while he (the Doc) took the eggs, three or four at a time, from the basket and, pretending to weigh them in his hand, laid them upon the farmer's arm.

Soon the farmer had to lean back to keep the eggs from rolling off, but Doc still piled them upon his Tront, until the poor man was bent back almost still piled them upon his front, until the poor man was bent back almost to the point of toppling over.

"What's this?" said Doc, with well assumed indignation. He held an egg up toward the sun and looked through it. "You said they were all fresh."

Thereupon he leaped into his buggy beside the friend who told this story to me, and the two drove away, leaving the farmer perfectly helpless, with
