It is expected that bank logs obtainable early in the coming season will command high prices. A dealer said Saturday that spruce longs would readily bring $13 at Springhill soon after the ice goes out. There will be a strong demand for logs early in the season, owing to there being no logs in the booms from last year and the fact that the market is in good condition. Just now the lumber buyers are pretty busy and many sales of large and small quantities are being made. The average prices per 1,000 being paid for logs are: Spruce, $11.50 to $12; battens, $9 to 9.50, and hemlock, $6. The Fredericton Boom Company this year are sending out representatives along the river and make contracts with the farmers to raft logs and deliver them at Springhill at 60 cents per thousand, and they may give 65 cents for logs which have to be brought a long distance. Heretofore, this work was done under contract with the lumbermen, who made contracts at about the same rate.
