JAIL PHYSICIAN CONDEMNS FOOD

making a complaint. Deceased remained in the jail from April 12 till he was taken to the hospital. During that time he thought the doctor visited him every second day. He saw him on the Saturday night here he was taken up to the hospital. He was not complaining. He remembered the father of deceased coming to the jail that night with a basket of food for his son, but could not remember that he asked after him. He had also brought a bundle of clothing soon after his son's commitment, which he threw into the cell, saying: "Here, put them on and keep from freezing." During the time McArthur was in the jail he had made no inquiry as to what underclothing he had on.
To the coroner witness said that after the doctor had prescribed for deceased they had left the bottle in the cell for him to take the medicine himself.
To County Secretary Kelley witness said that the guards on the night they leave the jail until they return, and he never interfered. "The jail building is heated with hot water and is kept at a comfortable temperature all the time. The blankets supplied are warm ones and if any of the prisoners ever report that a blanket is dirty it is taken away and another is given in its place. During the past winter the jail has been a little crowded, there being on the average 70 prisoners in it. The hard labor men never go to it if it is storming in the morning. The prisoners never at any time complained of having his clothes wet. He remembered that on the night of March 22 a basket of provisions had been brought to the jail for O'Brien who was in the cell with McArthur then, and another for deceased. O'Brien's contained fresh pork, vegetables and cigarettes, while McArthur's had cake, pie and apples. He had been told that the two prisoners ate all of this food.
The hard labor prisoners were supplied with overalls, jumpers, boots and shoes, which clothing they were supposed to leave when they go out.
Dr. Christie.
Dr. James Christie, physician and surgeon to the jail, described the routine of his visits to that institution. He was often called by telephone and afterwards he went as often as in his judgment he ought. He had seen McArthur on March 30. At that time the prisoner was extremely anemic, had a poor appetite and his heart was weak. Altogether, he looked as if he were a better, but healthy man. He gave him a tonic. On April 12 he saw McArthur again when the prisoner collapsed in the hall of the jail. That time he gave stimulants and visited him again on Sunday, when he had recovered from his state of collapse. His heart was weak, and witness gave him tonic and nerve stimulant. On the 18th he appeared to be better, but complained of a pain over the stomach. McArthur never complained to witness of ill-treatment.
On the night of April 22, said Dr. Christie was called to the jail and found McArthur almost helpless and in a state of semi-consciousness. He was sitting on the side of his bed with his head leaning on his elbow, and in answer to his questions as to how he felt he answered something very indistinctly. His pulse was very weak and thready. He administered stimulants, both hypodermically and orally, but without effect. He was strongly witness went into the office and again visited him about 1 o'clock. At that time he found that deceased had got very much worse, and he was driven rapidly to the hospital in a coach.
The doctor accompanied McArthur to the hospital and left him in the care of Dr. Malcolm and some nurses. At the time he was taken to the hospital he was suffering from pernicious anemia and heart failure.
At this point the coroner said that the evidence that had been given by the man who had a good appetite, and expressed the opinion that that was not the case in pernicious anemia.
Dr. Christie—"Well you might say that the man ate everything he was given, but there was never much in sight in the jail. For years the long term prisoners in the jail have been suffering from anemia. Let any man be on a stereotyped diet for four months as this man was and he will lose his appetite. They have bread and beef for dinner, tea, bread and molasses for supper, and molasses, tea and bread for breakfast. The material of the food is not very good. I'm not saying anything about that, but I will not say as much for the cooking. Why, they have nothing so appetizing as a potato and salt."
The coroner—"Don't they get lime juice once in a while?"
Dr. Christie—"Lime juice? No sir."
To Mr. Mullin witness said he remembered the father of deceased coming to his office on the day of the civic election and his mother calling on Sunday. He did not say to the father that the jail was no fit place for his son, and that he would make an effort to get him out. He did say to the mother that if her son got any worse he would advise Magistrate Ritchie to let him out.
In his opinion the reason why McArthur fainted in the hall of the jail was that the effort of walking up the steps had been too much for his weak heart. He had never spoken to anyone about McArthur being unwell to him, indeed he considered he was better outside than in the jail. His recollection was that deceased came out of his cell every time he went to see him, except on the last occasion.
In Dying Condition.
Witness did not remember McArthur's father asking him to give him a pill, but attention possible, offering to pay him for it. Mrs. McArthur paid him $1 on Sunday, which he thought was for the visit he had paid her son that day, and which he considered extra. He had examined the heart and lungs of McArthur on the 18th, again on the 18th. He had had no stethoscope, always preferring to make his examinations with his naked ear. The stethoscope was a help in some cases, but, generally speaking, he could make a better examination without it. At the

FURTHER TROUBLE OVER RIVER STEAMBOAT SERVICE

Dr. Currey Issues Writ Against M. D. Austin, and Claims That an Agreement Was Broken—Mr. Purdy Says His Company is Justified in Its Line of Action—Much Floating Ice in the River.

Rivalry between opposing steamship lines on the St. John river has often grown very bitter and this year the struggle for the patronage of the river people promises to find its way into the courts. Yesterday Dr. L. A. Currey, K. C., president and manager of the St. John River Steamship Company, Ltd., issued a writ against Marshal D. Austin to restrain him from giving a lease of the Star line wharf and warehouse at Indian town to the Crystal Steam Ship Company, although the river is full of floating ice. Dr. Currey went a step further by issuing a writ against the Crystal Steam Ship Company, asking damages for the placing of the Majestic on the Fredericton route, he says, of an agreement made between the managers of both companies on March 11 last.

Dr. Currey said last night that the agreement was that his company should not put a steamer on the Fredericton route and should not interfere with any wharves or terminals held by the other company. Mr. Purdy agreed, he said, not to place a steamer on the Fredericton route and not to interfere with the wharves or terminals of the St. John River Steamship Company, Ltd.

Mr. Purdy, when interviewed, said that according to the terms of his lease he was to take charge of the Star line wharf and warehouse on May 1 and he could do nothing until then. After that if he was prevented in any way from taking them over there would be all kinds of trouble. His company felt justified in any action it had taken, and Dr. Currey could talk all he liked and go ahead with any legal proceedings he wished to commence.

There is also some trouble at Fredericton, and Dr. Currey has asked the city council to support him in his plan to buy three steamers to run the capital during the summer. He already owns the steamer of the Star line, and holds under lease city wharves and warehouses under the name of the St. John River Steamship Company, Ltd. Mr. Purdy is asking, Dr. Currey believed, has given the council to understand that he would prefer that the wharves should not be given to Mr. Purdy and last evening a special meeting of the council was called to deal with the matter.

An interesting rumor in circulation to the effect that if the Majestic is not on the Fredericton route, Dr. Currey will purchase the steamer Majestic on the Washademoit, giving a daily service between Cole Island and Hamilton and connecting with the Elaine and the Victoria each day for both St. John and Fredericton.

At present the Majestic and Elaine are running to Fredericton on alternate days, although the river is full of floating ice above Gagetown and navigation is difficult. On her upward trip on Monday the Elaine passed through thirty ice floes and came back with her bow broken and her engine stopped. The Victoria will be ready to go on the 29th.

Yesterday the steamer Simons returned from McAdam on the Fredericton route, after an unsuccessful attempt to get up into the lake. There is still much ice in the Washademoit and it will be some time before the steamer can reach Cole Island. Capt. Hargrave of the steamer, the May Queen, will make a start on Saturday, but he does not expect to get up into Grand Lake until the 30th. The Simons returned yesterday brought a large cargo of hay and general country produce. A number of passengers also came to the city to purchase their spring supplies and the North End stores report a large number of seeds, fertilizers and provisions of all kinds. The Majestic arrived from Fredericton last evening, and both of Mr. Purdy's steamers will go up river again this morning. The steamer Champlain is now on the Belleisle route.
