A citizen called at the Transcript office on Tuesday evening and asked us to say that he purposes lodging a complaint with the magistrate against certain youths who have been annoying and abusing those unfortunates of our village who are weak in mind and body if they do not cease their conduct. It is disgraceful and shameful, he says, and should be put a stop to. He, therefore, gives this warning.

Were the wishes of the ratepayers in many municipalities considered it is very probable that few, if any, municipal elections would be held at the beginning of the year. Not only will the expenses incident to such elections be saved, but the divisions with its accompanying feeling, no matter how small, will be obviated. With the terrible war still raging and when the concentration of every effort is required to overcome the murderous Hun, an election contest might profitably be deferred.

Rev. Hugh D. Leitch, formerly of Walkers, who for the past three years and seven months has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at Kindersley, Sask., recently accepted a call extended by the Westminster congregation at Regina, to which charge he was inducted as pastor on October 19th and himself and family given a hearty welcome by the congregation. Dr. James H. Coyne, registrar of Elgin county, fell in stepping off a street car in St. Thomas and was seriously hurt.

Mr. Miers of Appin conducted the services in the Glencoe Presbyterian church on Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Weir, who was at Woodstock for the week-end. At the morning service Mr. Miers preached from the text "How can we escape, if we neglect so great salvation" and expounded his belief in a literal hell, and in the evening gave his version of the prophesy contained in the second chapter of Daniel. His addresses were interesting beyond the ordinary and rather startling in view of the present warring condition of the world. This war, he said, was only the beginning of sorrows, and our own land was shortly to be the scene of bloodshed and woe. At the conclusion of the world struggle there would be left but ten kingdoms, and these would be destroyed when Christ came to set up His Kingdon on the earth.

Munro-Watson

The manse at Burns' church, Mosa, was the scene of a very happy event on Wednesday, October 25th, when Miss Margaret Munro of Kilmartin and William Watson of St. Thomas were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Smith. The bride was dressed in a neat suit of navy blue broadcloth, trimmed with fur, and large picture hat, trimmed with plumes. Miss Winnifred Watson, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, and Mungo Leitch was groomsman.

After the ceremony dinner was served to a few friends at the bride's home. The young couple then motored to Glencoe and left amid showers of confetti and good wishes on the Grand Trunk Limited for Detroit and other points west. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold crescent brooch set with pearls, to the bridesmaid a cameo ring and to the groomsman a gold stickpin set with pearls. Mr. and Mrs. Watson will be at home to their friends at 15 Cedar street, St. Thomas, after December 1st.

Cheerfulness of Canadian Men In the Trenches

"ARE we downhearted? No!" would seem to continue as the watchword of the British army at the front. Stories are constantly arriving by mail and from newspaper correspondents to show the wonderful cheerfulness of the soldiers. In some respects war does not seem to change human nature. If a fellow is of a cheerful, fun-loving disposition at home, he will be found of a cheerful, fun-loving nature even in the midst of a fight, though there will be a grimmer quality in his humor. As an example, we have this story from The Brooklyn Eagle:

Both Canadians and Anzacs delight in the nocturnal raids made almost every night on the close-lying German trenches. On one of these recently a Canadian lieutenant worked his way, unseen to an enemy dugout and suddenly peered over the top. It was a nasty, rainy night, cold and damp, and a group of Germans were seated about a little stove.

"How many of you fellows down there?" called out the Canadian in a raucous voice.

"Nein," came back a startled and ambiguous reply.

"Well, share that among you," shouted the Canadian as he hurled a bomb into their midst and threw himself flat on the ground to avoid the effects of the explosion.

It appears that when Canadians are embarking for active service they are given pay-books in which their allowances are entered from time to time. The last page is a will form in blank. On the body of one young soldier killed in action the following will was found: "I give everything I have to the Home for Stray Cats, London, providing they do not take in any more black cats." It is said that this will was held to be valid, whether the home would accept the estate with this proviso being another question. Another Canadian wrote: "If I should die—(cheers)—I will everything to my mother—(loud and prolonged cheers)." This will, too, was held to be valid. Another young Canadian of the Flying Corps, we are told, had not written home for months, and finally received this cable: "No letters for weeks. Is anything wrong with the boy?" He replied (collect): "Very serious matter. Boy absolutely broke. Send much money."

The story is told of a popular young Canadian officer in mufti and on crutches who appeared one day in the lounge-room of a London hotel, where there were several brother-officers on leave. In reply to an invitation to "have something" he was obliged to refuse, saying that he had a crippled friend to look after. Presently the crippled friend hove in sight, also on crutches, his right leg gone at the knee. "You see," explained the first-comer, "we tossed a coin to see which one would look after the other and I lost." There is a rule in London that except in emergency cases ambulances must not drive more than five miles an hour. This slow pace is designed for the comfort of the wounded, but sometimes it has the opposite effect. A hard-hit Tommy was being conveyed to a hospital, and after a while he raised himself upon one elbow and said to the driver: "I say, would you mind driving a bit faster. This ain't no bally funeral." This recalls the story of one Tommy Dodd, who was blown some distance and seriously injured by a German shell. He recovered as he was being lifted on a stretcher, and murmured as he fainted again, "Home, James."

Soldier stories of amusing happenings at the front are many. There is considerable rivalry among the Canadians and the Anzacs. The English think they are both such good soldiers there is little to choose between them. This incident happened at a canteen sometimes ago when the Australians first came to the Western front. Several Canadians were within when they espied the wide-brimmed campaign hats that distinguish the Anzacs from all the other soldiers. The Canadians gave their fellow-colonials a hearty welcome and an equally hearty invitation to "have something." These fraternal details having been attended to, a Canadian turned to one of the Australians.

"When did you fellows come over?" he asked.

"Just got in this morning."

"Well, what you going to do?"

This was too good an opening for the Anzac.

"Oh," he said in a "swanky" tone, "we came over to finish what you fellows started."

"Humph," replied the Canadian, "it's a wonder you didn't first finish what you started yourself down at Gallipoli."

Then the trouble began. It was a Donnybrook affair for a time, but eventually peace was declared with renewed and mutual respect for Colonial fighting ability.

It is said that wounded soldiers home from the front, some of them so seriously hurt that they will never be able to fight again, resent curious questioning as to how they received their injuries. They do not feel that they ought to be stared at as though they were freaks. They reply briefly to questions, answering that they were hurt "Somewhere in No Man's Land." If the questioner appears to be too credulous he is apt to be regaled with a thrilling but highly imaginative account of the incident.

Indoor Occupation.

"You must take an interest in outdoor sports," said the physician.

"I do," replied the indolent citizen. "They provide my main reading every day."
