

are denied the privilege of attending any place of worship, or enjoying any measure of rest. When the present Bishop of London first came to the diocese, he interested himself much in the condition of the omnibus and cab drivers, and on one occasion addressed a large number of them in an omnibus yard at Islington. Efforts are from time to time made by benevolent individuals to improve the religious condition of this class, and a society has been formed to endeavour to secure for them the blessing of rest on the
