

ALMOST A NUN. 3.

sisted of a piece of dry bread and a glass of milk, or dry bread and an apple. Then one hour for fancy work, one hour to study, then supper at six. After that another hour for play, one hour for devotion, and at eight all had to go to bed.

Every Thursday morning we put on big aprons and went into the kitchen to learn to cook, and in the afternoon we did fancy work. On Saturday there was no school, but we worked hard all day. Some made wafer gods, others trimmed up the altar.

On Sunday we had eight o'clock mass, then breakfast, after that we could study, draw, paint or practice until dinner. After dinner we went for a walk, then vespers, devotion and recreation until bed time.

The first day of every month was a day of penance. We could not talk at all, except by signs, until night.
