EDITOR'S TALK

NEXT week three features alone will convince you that at the beginning of a New Year we are determined to keep up a better-than-ever service of good things in this paper. Our new serial has given the office a good long still-hunt to get a story fit to follow the "Blind Man's Eyes." "King, of the Khyber Rifles," by Talbot Mundy is the result.

"Our New Economics" will be the theme of an arresting illustrated article by Britton B. Cooke. Another Premier will be characterized by the editor at a time when the problems behind this man are rapidly making him one of our national figures.
