

be entrusted to other hands.

Your allusion to all the pay lists not having been returned to your office conveys the impression that you placed the money and pay lists, in some cases at least, in other hands. This should not again occur.

Further, such pay lists as were ready should have been forwarded in time to arrive before the close of the year accompanied by explanations concerning the others.

I am,

Sir,

Your obedt. Servant,

Alfred Smith

Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.
