TES AND COMMENTS.

Balfour showed true discernment when he remarked in a speech before the English Newspayer Society, the other evening, that the newspaper " in its capacity as an advertising agent is, after all, of the first importance to any civilized society, in smuch as it brings together those who have something to sell and those who have something to buy." The general news and comment and " all the other machinery of communicating information to the public,' he added, "really are not of more importance to the community at large than the power of communication by advertisement.

It is not too much to say that the development of modern civilization, has been assisted by no agent so powerful as the newspaper; and the progress of all trade, enterprise, and invention, which has distinguished this century, and more especially the last generation, has beer accelerated by no means more effectual than newspaper advertising. The advertisement, brings together the seller and the buyer, the supply and the demand, as in former times and to a comparatively limited extent they were brought by the fairs and market days. By thus facilitating and vastly increasing their means of communication, it has helped to reduce prices, to stimulate the competition and emulation from which comes improve ment in production, and to multiply the demand for the materials and the appliances which contribute to the advancement of civilization. The advertisement carries immediately to the remotest regions infor mation formerly obtainable only by the few and near, or which slowly extended by hearsay from the great central markets. With the assistance of improved means of transportation and communication largely dependent on it also for the publicity necessary to their prosperity, it has changed the whole face of modern society, given uniformity to its dress and its wants, and opened up to the inventor, the manufacturer, and all producers a market which is world wide. The sign of the merchant is no longer confined to his immediate place of business. He puts it in the newspaper for all men to see. Information requisite for everybody is obtainable by the great mass of the public from the advertisements only. Only by means of the advertisements can they both supply and make generally known private wants upon which their welfare depends. They serve as a labor exchange, a directory, a bulletin, a price list, and a means of obtaining distinction otherwise impossible for traders and pro-

The benefit that comes to a newspaper from its advertising is infinitesimal as compared with that received by the adver tisers themselves and by the public. The opportunity to purchase the publicity it affords is a privilege which, as Mr. Balfou says, is one of the most important conferred on society by the growth and development of the newspaper. Whatever tends to increase the circulation and to deepen the respect and confidence in a newspaper, inures directly to the advantage of the advertiser. The newspaper also gains in its power to serve the interests of the public in extending the range of its information. and elevating the quality of its intellectual ability, by thus serving the interests of th advertiser. All the public profit by the profit it receives as a means of communication between the buyer and the seller. Without publishing the advertisements, it would be deficient in some of the most useful information of the day. Without its other contents, maintained at the highest standard only by the assistance of advertising support, it would be valueless to the advertiser.

The use of the advertising advantages of a newspaper is really only in the beginning of its development. So far it has barely touched trade as compared with the extent to which it will be carried as business sagacity learns to appreciate its advantages, unequalled by any and all other methods of inviting patronage for nearly every department of business. The art of preparing advertisements so that they shall attract attention and provoke interest is also greatly improving at this time. They are beginning to be constructed with really admirable literary skill. Their typographical appearance in the newspapers is much better than formerly, especially for the advertiser. The advertisements have become more than ever a principal feature of interesting and important information. Their value to the advertisers is greate than ever, while more than ever the public are looking to them as guides in making their purchases and indications of business enterprise by which they can profit. As a rule, in the retail trade more especially, but also to a wide extent in wholesale production also, the larger the advertisers the larger is the volume of trade, and the greater the sum of the profits.

Nothing in this world is more distressi Acting in this world is more distressing and unfortunately it is too common in this Canada of ours, with its extremes of climate—its almost arctic winters and summer days of tropic heat—than to see a young life followers. days of tropic heat—than to see a young life fading away like a blighted vine. Its early days have been full of promise, but just when the young maiden becomes of a lovable age with everything to live for, or the young man evinces signs of business attitude, they are suddenly stricken down to often in months, or it may be works, there are empty chairs at the fireside and sore hearts left behind. Not always is this the case, however. Fortunately science has discovered remedies to check the ravages of the decline, when it has not gone too far. Recently a case of has not gone too far. Recently a case of this kind was brought to our notice, and the circumstances were so notable and attracted so much attention in the neighbor-

Henry Haines who has for several years past acted as farm foreman for Mr. Daniel Currie of Glen Walter, Glengarry county, has quite a large family, among them one daughter Mary, now about 18 years of age.
Until her 12th years he was much as other Until her 12th year she was much as other children, fairly rugged and without sick-ness of any kind. Then of a sudden she became delicate and as the months went on her parents were afraid she was going into a decline. Her heart beat feebly; she was feverish and flushed, slept badly and had but little appetite. Doctors were consulted, who talked about growing too fast, and such common places, and prescribed different medicines, none of which, however, appeared to be of any permanent benefit. A year or so ago the volume lady, howing a appeared to be of any permanent benefit. A year or so ago the young lady, hoping a change of air might accomplish for her what medicine could not, went to Fort Covington, N. Y., where she had some relatives, and engaged as a nurse. Even this light employment, however, proved too much for her and in the spring she returned to her parents a perfect wreck, with nothing to do but die, as she thought. But when least expected aid was at hand. Mr. Haines had been reading of the marvellous cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and reasoned within himself that if they had cured others they might save his daughter's life. On the next visit to Cornreopie, and reasoned within himself that if they had cured others they might save his daughter's life. On the next visit to Cornwall he bought a half dozen boxes of Pink Pills. It may be easily imagined that Miss Haines required little persuasion to try the much talked of remedy, and well for her it was that she did so. In the course of a week she felt an improvement. By the time she had taken two and a half boxes she realized that she was experiencing such health as she had never known before, and her friends began to remark and congratulate her on the change in her appearance. Still perserving in the use of the pills, she found herself when at the end of the fifth box in perfect health and able to engage in all the work of the household and the amusements from which she had up to that time been debarred. She had an excellent appetite and no one could wish to feel better. Hearing of the marvellous change her sister from Fort Covington came over to satisfur Hearing of the marvellous change her sister from Fort Covington came over to satisfy herself, and could hardly be persuaded that the robust, happy looking girl was indeed her sister whom she had never expected to see alive again. Miss Haines says she cannot say enough in favor of Dr. Williams' wonderful Pills, to which she feels assured she owes her life.

A Skeleton in the Closet.

How often do we hear of this in domestic life at this day. But what is more appalling than the living body made repulsive with skin and scalp diseases, salt-theum, tetter, eczema and scrollous sores and swellings. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the positive cure for all of these diseases. If taken 'utime, it also cures Lung-Scrofula, con' hiy known at Pulmonary Consumption, druggists.

Within 12 Hours After First Dose the Pain Left Me"—Rheumatism of Seven Years' Standing Cured in a Few Days.

Days.

I have been a victim of rhoumatism for seven years, being confined to bed for months at a sime, unable to turn myself. I have been treated by many physicians in this part of the country, none of whom benefited me. I had no faith in rheumatic cures advertised, but my wife induced me to get a bottle of South American Rheumatic Cure from Mr. Taylor, druggist, of Owen Sound. At the time I was suffering agonizing pain, but inside of twelve hours after I took the first dose the pain left me. I continued until I took three bottles, and I consider I am completely cured.
