

SKYLINE OF THE FUTURE

Mr. Rudyard Kipling Lectures on the Aspects of Travel.

LONDON, March 6.—Mr. Rudyard Kipling for a few brief moments on Tuesday night forsook poetry and embraced prose, for at the Queen's Hall he gave a delightful lecture to a large audience on "Some Aspects of Travel."

It has been the ambition of many agents to induce the poet to take the platform, but he resisted all their blandishments. Lord Curzon of Kedleston, the president of the Royal Geographical Society, explained how he managed to secure Mr. Kipling's services. Some two years ago the famous author was a guest at the society's annual banquet and made a fascinating speech, in which he showed the most sympathetic appreciation of the society's work. "The moment I heard that speech," remarked Lord Curzon, "I saw that Mr. Kipling was predestined by Providence to read a paper to us, and accordingly while he was under the influence of the good fare I extracted a half promise from him—and it is now fulfilled."

Mr. Kipling has an excellent manner as a lecturer—easy and conversational. He read his address, but so adroitly that he gave the impression

LA GRIPPE'S VICTIMS

You Can Only Recover From its After Effects by Enriching the Blood.

Few diseases so shatter the health as the grippe or influenza. Its victims all tell the same story. They are left despondent, tired, weak and wretched in every way. They have no appetite, ambition or strength; cannot sleep and suffer from headaches, backaches and nervousness, in this weakened condition lies the real danger. The body falls an easy prey to bronchitis, pneumonia, and even to consumption. Nearly every form of nervous trouble has been known to follow an attack of la grippe. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give the quickest and most thorough relief from the after effects of this trouble. They build up and purify the blood, drive the poisons out of the system and give strength and tone to the whole body. The following is an example of their power in cases of this kind. Mrs. R. A. McLean, Wentworth Station, N.S., says: "Two years ago Herbert E. Freeman, a young boy living with us, was attacked with la grippe. At the time he did not have a strong constitution, and was feared the trouble was settling on his lungs. He was not able to walk five yards without being out of breath and his general vitality was very low. For months he continued in this position notwithstanding all we did for him, and it was at this crisis that we got Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for him. By the time he had used three boxes there was a noticeable improvement, and this was followed by his being able to do light work, and later he had all the strength of a grown-up boy. His cure was looked upon as remarkable by all who knew him, and I am giving the result in the hope that it may be of benefit to someone else." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 20 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OFFERS $6,000,000 FOR TERRAZAS PROPERTY

GENERAL LUIS TERRAZAS' PALACE OF TEARS—AN AMERICAN WOULD BUY IT

Price McKinney, of Cleveland, has made an offer of $6,000,000 to Luis Terrazas for his vast estate in Chihuahua, Northern Mexico, now in possession of General Francisco Villa, with $250,000 to the latter for the constitutional war chest if he will sanction the sale.

The Terrazas estate is worth many millions. The haciendas and all the homes were seized by Villa and the family fled. Don Luis' Palace of Tears is the name that the Mexicans have given to the million dollar palace of marble and cut stone which General Terrazas was having built at the time he was forced to leave Chihuahua. It is in this palace, yet unfinished, that the women folk of the Terrazas family lived after the evacuation of Chihuahua and while Luis Terrazas, Jr., was being held a prisoner in the palace across the plaza. It was the weeping of these women, who were forced to wait, that gave to the palace its name.

that it was spontaneous. Once he turned to a blackboard and drew with a piece of chalk, but not very well, an isosceles triangle with a narrow base.

This was to illustrate what he called the psychology of moving bodies under strain—a characteristic jiggling touch. He presented himself as a recorder of experiences which are on the eve of being superseded because "the time is near when men will receive their normal impressions of a new country suddenly and in pain—not slowly and in perspective; when the word "inaccessible," as applied to any given spot on the surface of the globe will cease to have any meaning."

Personal Experience.

As an example of the "psychology of moving bodies" Mr. Kipling gave an experience of his own—the one march he ever had to make in a hurry, when his impression at the time, as well as the memory, that stayed with him afterwards, as that of the unrolling of a ribbon. His mind projected itself along an imaginary, straight line—in this instance, white against dull green.

It would be interesting he observed—and he turned towards Sir Edward Shackleton—if any of the Polar men who work against white backgrounds would tell us how the idea of their work presents itself to them while they are engaged in it. "I have heard that the dog train mail runners of Alaska and Northern Canada sometimes see their winter trails as short straight lines strung with beads—that is to say as a diagram of the faint sleigh traces with dogs attached."

"I have not exactly a theory, but an idea," said Mr. Kipling, "that first-class leaders of expeditions, however definite and urgent their conceptions of their work, either do not visualize too much or keep their powers of visualization under control. And there is reason for that, too. An old propector once warned me, 'As long as you've only got yourself to think about you can think as much as you damn well please. When you've got other folks' hides to answer for, you must quit thinking for your own amusement.'"

What makes a leader? There is no headmark by which we can recognize such men before they have proved themselves, is Mr. Kipling's judgment. But it looked as though self sacrifice, loyalty and a robust view of moral obligations went far to make a leader, the capacity to live alone and inside himself being taken for granted.

There were accidents for which no allowance was made or could be made. But these things were part of the rule of the road. They have never hindered men from leading or following.

Gamble Against Death.

"Even in these days a man has but to announce that he is going to gamble against death for a few months on a totally inadequate cover, and thousands of hitherto honest Englishmen will fawn and intrigue and, if necessary, be like anyone you choose to think of, in order to be allotted one life-share in the venture."

"What of the future? Presently, very presently, we shall convert two hundred miles across any part of the earth into its standardized equivalent—that is to say into two hours. And whether there be one desert or a dozen mountain ranges in that two hundred miles will not affect our time table by five minutes."

"Frankly, said Mr. Kipling, one is not so much interested in the achievements of the future as in the men of the present who are already setting and reporting along its fantastic skyline. The old mechanism is scrapped; the moods and emotions that went with it follow. Only the spirit of men carries on unaltered and unappeasable. There will arise risks to be met as cruel as any that Hudson and Scott faced; dreams as world-wide as Columbus, or Cecil Rhodes dreamed, to be made good or to be died for, and decisions to be taken as splendidly terrible as that which Drake clinched by Magellan, or Oates a little further south. There is no break in the line; no leads are missing; the men of the present have begun the discovery of the new world with the same devoutly careless passion as their predecessors completed the discovery of the old."

Motorist Sent for Trial

Ronald Constable Maxwell, aged twenty-one, a mining student, of London was committed for trial at Peterborough on Tuesday charged with causing the death of Andrew Mason, of Stanford, on Dec. 30. It was alleged that Maxwell was driving a motor car to Herwick on the wrong side of the road and was about to stop when he collided with Mason, who died soon afterwards. It was stated that he had sent £300 to Mason's widow in compensation.

A WONDERFUL COLD CURE.

Just think of it, a cold cured in ten minutes—that's what happens when you use "Catarrhozone." You inhale its soothing balsams and out goes the cold—sniffles are cured—headache is cured—symptoms of catarrh and grippe disappear at once. It's the healing pine essences and powerful antiseptics in Catarrhozone that enable it to act so quickly. In disease of the nose, for irritable throat, bronchitis, coughs and catarrh it's a marvel. Safe even for children. 25c and $1.00 sizes at all dealers.

Football

We are now in the thick of the football season cup ties, international, and league games fairly tumbling over each other.

Next Saturday four of the very best cup ties will have set down on one day will be decided, after which we shall have fewer interruptions of league football.

Shea is showing "out something just now, and yet there were those who said he would never settle down in Blackburn.

The league's selection for the game at New Cross seems to have panned out very well, and the game on Monday acted as a nice rehearsal.

Probably Johnson this afternoon would be thinking that noteworthy encounter at Ayresome when he pulled a corner kick into the net against Ireland, and rather tarnished his reputation.

There were few who "tipped" Elliott as centre forward for England, but his consistently good football and effective methods of feeding his wings were bound to be recognized.

Woodward and Ivan Sharpe played a wonderful game in the amateur international, and quite made the Welsh defence look small.

Sheffield Wednesday are having a fight their way through to the cup in more ways than one.

Two protests against their have been opposed to the rules, and hence "dismissed with costs."

Bowser, the Albion forward, missed two beauties against the Villa, and this made all the difference between losing and drawing as the score went.

There was an unpleasant incident at the close of the North End and Chelsea match, and more may be heard of it.

Chelsea did not all appreciate the validity of the last goal, which gave the North Enders a point.

Martin must remain at "outside-left," says "Corinthians," "he has done some remarkable things."

It is freely stated that Manchester United will need other players of equal merit to Travers if they are to improve upon their recent performances.

They have only five more matches to play on their own grounds, namely against Everton, Sheffield Wednesday, Chelsea, Manchester United and Preston.

Two of the clubs are themselves threatened with a place in the second division, so that it will be a rather stiff wind-up which the "Rams" have to look forward to.

Burnley are looking forward to a close challenge of their record at Turf Moor, when Bolton are due for the third round cup tie.

Respecting the change in the qualifying stages of the cup next season it is questionable whether their palatable sop to the clubs who fail to cure exemption from all the early rounds is worth the upset which will be caused.

There seem to be some of the F.A. experts who are never happier than when they are tinkering at the rules.

Finding that they are out of work, so far as the laws of the game are concerned, they would appear to be turning their attention to the rules of the cup competition.

The nearest suggestion now made is that there be an upper deck kind of goal, say eight feet above the present goal, and that half a goal be allowed when the ball goes through the two posts.

Football Competition

All that is necessary is to cross out in ink the names of the teams which the competitor thinks will not win. In case the intention is to designate a draw, both teams should be crossed out.
