NEW YORK, Sept 28—An unsuccessful attempt to mine the harber at Guernsey, England, said to have been made by a disguised German cruiser, which had on board 1,000 German marines and enough explosives to blow up a dozen warships was reported today by Miss Margaret Daniels, a missionary of the Baptist foreign missionary society, upon her arrival aboard the French liner Espagne, from Havre.

The vessel, according to Miss Daniels, was disguised as a Dutch merchantman. The Dutch flag flying at the topmast aroused the suspicion of the British authorities who had made arrangements with the Dutch government that their vessels entering English ports should fly the Dutch flag at half mast. The ship was accordingly surrounded by torpedo boats, and a search revealed 1,000 German marines hidden below decks. The marines were arrested and sent to a detention camp.
