KLONDIKE NUGGET.

From Friday's Daily.

ANARCHISTS MUST GO.

The progress of anti-anarchist legislation which has been inaugurated by the government of the United States will be followed with much interest. In the measure now pending before congress it is proposed, if possible, to prevent persons of anarchistic leanings from landing at any American port.

For the protection of the president's life another bill has been introduced which makes any attempt to kill the president whether successful or not a crime punishable by death.

These two bills, which with some modifications, will undoubtedly be passed by the present congress, will be condemned by some people as tending toward unnecessary interference with personal liberty.

Such objections will come, however, from the identical class of criminals who it is hoped may be reached and controlled by the legislation in question. Law abiding citizens whose minds are normally constituted need have no fear or can offer no serious opposition to such legislation.

The United States and Great Britain have been the places of refuge most largely sought by anarchist refugees. Their numerical strength in both countries is much greater than would, perhaps, be imagined. It is proposed hereafter that insofar as the former country is concerned it will no longer afford an asylum for such criminals.

This determination should prove a long stride in the direction of solving the problem. The anarchist breed cannot be completely extinguished without the co-operation of all the civilized powers, and the movement about to be inaugurated by the United States government, will probably be the beginning of an united effort having that end in view.

The incorporation ordinance passed its first reading yesterday. It is an extremely voluminous document, and intelligent comment as to its merits can not be made until its various provisions are closely scanned. The al-

Stroller's Column.

The people of Hunker are of a social turn of mind and the result is that considerable time is devoted to the cultivation of social nature. Hunker, like all other creeks in the Klondike, has numerous road houses and the road house that does not give a dance every ten days or two weeks is looked upon with suspicion. In fact, a road house can give a dance on the least provocation. Any improvement, no matter how trivial, if it is only a few pieces of fresh thinking, must be followed by a "grand opening."

Two Red Roses. There is an innate satisfaction in the possession of the genuine. On the other hand, there is a grateful sense of superiority in having got the better of some one in the palming off of the artificial. So it is really rather difficult to decide offhand whether it is more pleasing to exhibit the true or the spurious. As a matter of fact, the latter is of such skillful contrivance these days as to make it almost impossible of detection.

At a recent Saturday evening "at home," a function at which the ever present chafing dish plays an important part, the appearance of the hostess was admirably set off by the delicately tinted tea rose, fragrant, modest and bewitching, which peeped out from the artistically arranged coils of copper colored hair. Wherever the hostess moved, there moved masculine admiration and feminine envy. The rose, with its unassuming scent, was just the touch necessary to the success of the Grecian toilet.

HUNKER ROAD HOUSE "GRAND OPENING."

exception to those of other creeks. They all have bars for which they pay a relentless and grasping government good money (all governments agree in that respect) and in order to make that money a "grand opening" must be of frequent occurrence. The Hunker people are in luck in that they have an orchestra that, if it should ever become lost, strayed or stolen, would be easily described as one is a white man and the other a negro. The former is a violinist while the latter can pick a banjo with the ease, grace and "frugance" of a minstrel of the Billy West type. He can also sing Goo-Goo eyes.

One night last week a "grand opening" was given on Hunker. Things are seldom opened with prayer, a corkscrew being generally employed. All the people were present on either side, including some young men from Whiskey Hill. The name is not applied for the reason that there is ever any whiskey there for there is not. It is always drunk as soon as it gets there.

At the dance in question were a number of young men from "Hootch-ness elevation" and one of them, a three-in-one-cut-away youth, wore a pair of dancing pumps in order that he might "heel and toe and the way we go" with an ease and grace that would cause one lady to whisper to another: "Ain't he a lolopulus?"

In order to protect his patent leathers from the rough places on the new government road, he wore a pair of moccasins over them, removing them and placing them behind the bar on reaching the scene of jollification. The orchestra was at its best and the young man with the pumps was in his glory. After every dance he would go to the bar to make sure his moccasins were still safe. Time sped away and the hour for adjourning arrived. The young man thought of his moccasins and put them on over his pumps. With his partner he started home and after covering something like two miles made a discovery. He stopped short on the road and said: "Shay pard, I've lost one or my moccasins. Lesh go back an look fer it."

In vain did his partner protest against going back. The other knew the late census returns which say there are 20,000. The Stroller is convinced that not over two of every three persons were enumerated and if any one doubts the assertion let him ask of those he meets the question: "Were you interviewed by a census man?" If over two-thirds say they were, then will the Stroller retire from the position he holds. However, there is no doubt but that the enumerators searched most diligently for population, else how would 900 Esquimaux have been discovered? There is no doubt but that a lot of white trash was overlooked in the mad rush to find Esquimaux but as 900 of the latter were found, the fact that many whites were over-looked can be forgiven.

The heating arrangement in the hardware store of McLennan & McPeely is a fearfully and wonderfully constructed contrivance which is just as apt to be taken for a grain separator or a quart as it is to be suspicious of being a stove. A lady in the store a few days ago mistook the contrivance for a washing machine and laid her hand on it. Then she found what it was there for.

It is a fact that brothers seldom write letters to each other. While they may be almost inseparable while growing up, when they attain to manhood and their paths diverge they rarely ever take either the time or trouble to communicate with each other by letter. This is not as it should be, but it is a fact all the same. Occasionally thoughts of boyhood's happy days when the two brothers were wont to break every thing on the farm from wild colts down to cats to harness return, a flood of tender recollections of the brother now far away returns and on sudden impulse a letter is written to him, but these impulses are rare.

By the last mail a large envelope came to the postoffice directed to Tom Chisholm. Imagine his delight on opening it to find that, besides a long letter, it contained a picture of his brother Joe whom he had not seen for many years. The letter read: Zoological Garden, Cincinnati, Ohio, November 2, 1901.

"Dear Brother Tom—As I have just had my picture taken I enclose you one, also a few lines. Tom, there are but the two of us left. I am not very well. It was an unlucky day for us when they trapped us on our native island, Borneo. You were lucky to escape and go north while poor unfortunate me have been kept in captivity and exhibited all over the United States to admiring idiots who always say "He is cute, but my gracious, how homely he is!"

"Say, Tom, suppose you come back in disguise and perhaps I can escape us on our native island, Borneo. You can live in the trees and eat coconuts. Write and tell me what you think of my plan. How do you like your only brother's picture? Some folks say it flatters me. Others who remember you say we look very much alike. When you write send a cut of your mug; also say what you think of the proposition to return to Borneo.

"Your loving brother Joe."

George De Lion is something of a horse fancier, one of his chief ambitions being to own a stepper that will lay all over anything on the road when it comes to speed. In order to gratify this particular ambition De Lion began looking around for a horse one day lately. An evil spirit ran him up against Tom Kirkpatrick and before he could make good his escape Tom had sold him a horse that he warranted to have more speed than any other nag in the Yukon. In one respect Tom was probably right for as no one was ever able to get any speed out of the horse, he still has all he ever had. In fact, De Lion has found that the ...Show Us, Commissioner...

The project is on foot to incorporate the town of Dawson. A splendid idea, that; it sounds fine. But on second thought, what inducement is offered the people for the change? Can we, for instance, have a voice in the affair, or are we to be placed in the principal part of the taxes in the Transvaal. Are the people who pay the principal part of the taxes of this territory to be allowed a vote in the municipal affairs. We understand as the law now stands an alien, with certain property qualifications, has that right. Is it the intention of the Yukon council to change the law for the purpose of disfranchising the alien residents of this city? Commissioner, you will make a mistake if that policy is carried out. The best interests of this country can be better subserved by giving to the people more generous laws than in stultifying those which favor us.
